SOCIETY DANCING TEACHER RESIGNS

Wealthy Back Bay Women Who Were Patronesses of Castle House Call for Resignation of Mrs. Lucia H. Freeman

Tutor of Fashionable Sex Also Gives Up Expensive Apartment at Copley Plaza; May Return Here to Press Divorce Case

Mrs. Lucia M. Freeman, until recently proprietor of Castle House, Boston's erstwhile centre for fashionable dancing, has left Boston.

Her departure followed the resignation and was coincidental with a meeting of a group of wealthy Back Bay women, who asked for Mrs. Freeman's resignation. These women who had loaned their names as patronesses to Castle House, which is at the Toy Theatre, included:

Mrs. J. De Forest Danielson, Mrs. Francis Crowninshield, who replaced Mrs. Harold Coolidge; Mrs. John T. Linnee, Mrs. Harris Livermore, Mrs. Joseph S. Lovering, Mrs. Lincoln Davis, Mrs. Lucius M. Sargent, Mrs. Richard D. Sears, Mrs. Hollis French, Mrs. Lyman Gale, Mrs. Ronald Lyman, Mrs. Roger Sturgis, Mrs. Nathan Morton, Mrs. James L. Putnam, Mrs. J. L. Bremer, Mrs. H. L. Movius and others.

The action of the patronesses came as the result of objections which they found to Mrs. Freeman's management of Castle House.

DIVORCE LIBEL FILED.

Mrs. Freeman's whereabouts are unknown but it is expected that she will shortly return to Boston to press her divorce libel, which is on file at the East Cambridge courthouse, and which comes up at the April term of the divorce court.

Mrs. Freeman's departure from Castle House has caused surprise among her friends, for, at the same time, she gave up her expensive apartment at the Copley-Plaza Hotel and has not been seen at the hotel recently.

During her proprietorship of Castle House a sensation was caused by the discovery that a surveillance of the Toy Theatre building was being maintained by detectives, and it was presumed that these detectives were in the employ of Frederick W. Freeman, Mrs. Freeman's husband, of Newton.

It later turned out that Mrs. Freeman employed detectives to try and discover the perpetrator of certain petty thefts that took place while the Toy Theatre was being completed.

Mrs. Freeman was Miss Lucia M. Proctor, the daughter of a Newton family, well connected socially. She married Frederick Freeman, March 26, 1903, at Portland, Me. Mr. Freeman was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and had been employed in a woolen mill at Watertown. He is now in the woolen business in Portland.

DANCE TUTOR FOR SOCIETY.

The couple had three children, Helen Barbara, ten, Frederic William, Jr., eight and Robert B., six years old. In her divorce libel Mrs. Freeman alleges that on January 1, 1912, her husband deserted her without cause.

Following the separation, which caused much surprise among the friends of the pair, Mrs. Freeman decided to learn dancing as a means of livelihood and she went to New York where she finally received a diploma at the Castle House there.

Following this she came to Boston and gave dancing lessons in the homes of the wealthy in and around Boston. Meantime the three children went to live with the parents of Mr. Freeman in West Newton. When Mrs. Freeman learned that the Toy Theatre was to be built she conceived the idea of having ball room classes there and sought the sponsorship of a group of wealthy women.

Even before the Toy Theatre opned she launched her fashionable classes there. These were attended by a notable list of fashionable Back Bay group of patronesses. Mrs. Freeman was at first much in vogue and she continued with large and paying classes for a time. Then these began to fall off in attendance.

THE DANGER OF IT.

A Warning Which May Save Your Life or That of Your Children.

Be careful what you take for a cold. Many so-called "cold cures," "cough balsams," etc., contain opium, morphine or other poisonous drugs. Remember that Father John's Medicine is absolutely free from dangerous drugs, and has had more than fifty years' success for colds and throat and lung troubles.

Champ Clark Predicts Big Trade Boom

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The Democratic caucus has given Champ Clark a unanimous and enthusiastic renomination which is equivalent to a re-election to the speakership of the Sixty-fourth Congress. This is the message Champ Clark sends to the Democratic party and the country:

"Every Democratic member understands thoroughly that on the successful work of the sixty-fourth Congress depends in large measure the prosperity of the country and the success of the Democratic party. Consequently we will enter upon our labors intent upon doing our best.

Business is reviving from the comatose condition to which it was reduced by the European-African-Asiatic war.

"Farmers are planting and preparing to plant a larger acreage of all cereals certain of top prices. The railroads are buying rails, ties, cement and other building materials and are now putting men to work instead of laying them off as they have been doing for eighteen months. Most assuredly the trend of things is upward. The chances are that there will not be an idle man in America who wants to work by the fourth of July.

Edward N. Capen of Dorchester Dead

Edward N. Capen, seventy-seven, of Dorchester, died last night at his home, the old Capen house, on Mount Ida, Dorchester. Mr. Capen was at one time the owner of what is now the most densely populated section of Dorchester. His father, Nathan Capen, was postmaster of Boston from 1857 to 1860. In 1861 Edward N. Capen formed the Boston branch of the Aladdin Oil Company of Pittsburgh, and ten years later became the head of the oil concern of Capen, Pierce & Sprague, which continued until the year 1885, when it was sold out to the Standard Oil Company. He was a member of the Algonquin Club, and of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Government Seizes Irish Newspaper

LONDON, Feb. 6.—A Central News dispatch from Dublin states that the police have seized thousands of copies of the weekly paper, The Worker, which is printed in Glasgow. The papers were being transported from a steamer when seized. The Worker is alleged to be a substitute for the Irish Worker, which already had been suppressed.

Underwood Favors a National Budget

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Majority Leader Underwood in the House today, shortly after the sundry civil appropriation bill was taken up, again warned his colleagues against extravagance. He spoke in favor of a "budget" system as against the present practice of estimates in making appropriations.

Chapple Named Salem Solicitor

Mayor Matthias J. O'Keefe of Salem announces that he has offered the post of city solicitor to William D. Chapple. The present solicitor is Michael L. Sullivan, who is attorney for Henry K. Mansfield of Ferncroft inn in the $50,000 breach of promise suit brought by Elizabeth M. Ryan. He was appointed by Mayor Hurley.

Ready to Lay Tracks to New Fish Pier

Plans are reay for the car tracks to be laid to the new fish pier, South Boston. The Elevated will lay the tracks, the Commonwealth will then meet the expenses, the Elevatel paying 4 per cent. on the investment.

John H. Hanan is Dying in Paris Hotel

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Word was received today that John H. Hanan, the wealthy shoe, manufacturer, is dying of pneumonia at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Paris. Mrs. Hanan sailed for Europe today on the Cunard liner Franconia.

POLICE PUZZLE: WHO FOR "SUPER"?

Captains Canney, Goode, Harriman and Sullivan and Chief Inspector M'Garr the Favorites; Leo Rogers Is Also Mentioned

Gossip That O'Meara Will Name Supt. Pierce Again, from "Civil Life," Continues; Commissioner, as Usual, Is Non-Committal

Gossip last night, at Police Headquarters in Pemberton square, was practically all to the effect that a general order, announcing the retirement of Superintendent William H. Pierce on a $2,500 pension, will be issued by Commissioner O'Meara tomorrow.

What the men wanted to know, in all the eighteen divisions or precincts, was the name of the gentleman whom Commissioner O'Meara will name as the boss of 1,500 policemen. The politicians of the department prepared their unofficial lists of entries, and a slate of possible winners would read like this:

Captain James Canney of LaGrange street, fifty-seven years old and a policeman since 1888.

Captain Thomas F. Goode of the Back Bay, forty-six years old and an officer since 1895.

Captain Joseph Harriman of Jamaica Plain, sixty-one; member of the department since 1886.

Captain James P. Sullivan of Court Square, fifty-seven; policeman since 1886.

The report that Police Commissioner O'Meara, taking advantage of his right to go outside the department for a superintendent, might now name William H. Pierce, was generally dismissed as not worthy of credence. Some in Pemberton Square, favoring this report, argued, however, that O'Meara will be likely to do the thing that everybody else says is out of the question.

WHERE IT STARTED.

In this connection one public man, well versed in police affairs, last night called attention to the fact that the first step towards the retirement of Superintendent Pierce on half pay did not come and could not have come from City Hall and Mayor Curley but originated in O'Meara's office.

"The Mayor," said this gentleman, "acts on these cases only when the Superintendent of Police calls his attention officially to the fact that an officer has reached the retirement age. Superintendent Pierce was sixty-five years old on the ninth day of March one year ago and at that time Commissioners O'Meara's office called the attention of Mayor Curley's office to this fact."

So runs the gossip, but it is nevertheless argued that, in part because Mr. Pierce is now in his sixty-seventh year, and in part because of the growing Boston dislike of having the Police Department of New England's biggest city conducted theoretically from the State House but practically from under the Commissioner's hat, Commissioner O'Meara is unlikely to furnish his many critics with powder by renominating, "from civil life," a retired superintendent who has been a "civilian" less than sixty seconds.

Hence, discarding other captains because they are "too young," "too inexperienced," or "too old," policemen-politicians said last night that the Commissioner will most likely pick his "Super" from among the five men named in alphabetical order above.

Newspapermen who follow departmental affairs as closely as possible under the "closed door" regime say, however, that it will not surprise them to hear that Mr. O'Meara has chosen his former secretary, Leo Rogers, now an assistant United States District Attorney.

Sullivan of Court Square has "a way about him," a knack of getting along well with everybody, including newspaper reporters. Because of this popularity there was a general disposition yesterday to strike his name from the list of eligibles. But one can never tell.

Dead Woman Is Found in Muddy River

The body of a woman, about thirty-five years of age, was found floating in Muddy River, Penway, last night, by Lawrence Kilroy of No. 385 Lamartine street, Jamaica Plain, who is employed as a watchman by the park department.

Kilroy was walking along the banks of the river and found a hat. Further investigation revealed the body floating in the water. Securing a rope and pole, Kilroy pulled the body into the shore and notified the police.

The only possible means of identification were a gold wedding ring and a horse shoe shaped breast pin, set with imitation diamonds. There were no labels on the clothing.

The woman was about five feet six inches in height and weighed 135 pounds. She had dark hair and gray eyes. The body was attired in a black jacket and skirt, white shirt waist, grey sweater, black shoes and stockings.

Asks $1,500 Because He Was Kissed

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—C. Mason Griffin, a prominent business man of Washington, "who was kissed by a chorus girl in the presence of his wife," has brought suit for $1,500 against the Southern States Producing Company of Philadelphia and Allen J. Bachrach, proprietor of the Casino Theatre here. Mr. Griffin states in his bill that the act caused "him great mental pain and anguish and made him the subject of ridicule."

Last Monday Mr. Griffin and his wife attended the performance of the "Southern Roseburds" at the Casino Theatre. He says, "certain ladies" came down the aisles from the stage and one of them "did assault the plaintiff with intent to kiss" and "in spite of the attempts of the plaintiff to push her away did kiss the plaintiff."

Daniels to Plead for Fighting Ships

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels will ask the Senate to restore to the naval appropriation bill the item for a gunboat struck out by the House, and also to restore the provision to permit the expenditure of $1,000,000 for aeronautics. He will not ask for the hospital ship the House took out of the bill, but will concentrate all his efforts on getting fighting ships for the navy. He also intends to press the naval reserve bill.

Big Stockyards Under Quarantine

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The Department of Agriculture today placed the stock yards in Chicago, Indianapolis, Louisville, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Jersey City, Pittsburgh and Columbus, O., under quarantine following the discovery of cases of foot and mouth diseases at all those points. Animals in transit which happened to be at any of the quarantined yards at the time the order arrived and which display no foot and mouth disease symptoms will be permitted to move to destination.

Awarded $8,152,586 Envelope Contract

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The Post-office Department's 4-year standard envelope contract, calling for the manufacture of more than nine billion stamped envelopes and an expenditure of $8,152,586, today was awarded by Postmaster-General Burleson to the Middle West Supply Company of Columbus, Ohio.

The Middle West Company underbid its only competitor, the Mercantile Corporation of New York, present holder of the contract, by $1,196,297. A saving of approximately $300,000 a year is assured.

British Won't Treat Aviators as Pirates

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Russia's intention to treat as pirates men who shell unfortified towns will not be followed here. Aviators act under orders from the military authorities, and it would be difficult for a court to fix the responsibility for the killing by a bomb upon a certain individual.

The official opinion in England is that a court would discharge any captured airman who came to trial under the ordinary criminal procedure.

GUNMAN INVADES POLICE STATION

Draws Revolver in Headquarters and Threatens to Kill Inspector Alfred N. Douglas, After Asking the Latter for Some Money

Inspector Grapples with Stranger and Two Other Officers Arrive in Time to Lend Assistance; Man Is Finally Locked Up

Inspector Alfred N. Douglas, sitting alone at 10:40 o'clock last night in the room of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation at Police Headquarters, looked up from some official reports to take note of a visitor.

The stranger was a man of about thirty, well dressed for a working man, with what looked like a diamond stud in his new tie.

"I am out of work," said the man. "I am hungry and I want some money."

"Well, old man," said Douglas, "I'm sorry to hear it. I'll see if I cannot do something."

The inspector arose, went to a suit in a wardrobe nearby, dug for some loose change, found a quarter, and stepped around from the wardrobe to the cleared place, where the man was waiting for him.

"Take this," said Douglas, "and good luck to you."

JIMMY REVOLVER.

Whereupon the young man from the street pulled a 32-calibre gun, stuck it in the policeman's face and said:

"No, no! me no want money; me come to shoot!"

Inspector Douglas struck the stranger's pistol hand in less time than it takes to tell about it, grappled with him, and went to the floor with him.

They were rolling around the office together, the man from outside shrieking like an Indian, when Inspector John F. Linton and Sergeant John F. Mitchell entered the office with a prisoner.

Leaving their own man to shift for himself, Linton and Mitchell piled onto the man with the gun, took the pistol away from him, and gripped his wrists in handcuffs.

INTENDED SUICIDE.

Before they locked him up for the night, in the City Prison, the man who asked for money but didn't want it said his name is Joseph Muskolop and claimed to live at No. 152 Leverett street in the West End. He says he is a laborer.

He is charged with having a loaded revolver. He told the prison attendants that he had no intention to do Douglas any harm but meant, instead, to commit suicide. The police are inquiring into his antecedents.

When the fuss was all over, Linton and Mitchell found their own prisoner waiting for them, like a regular prisoner, so he was locked up, also.

Polish Flag Cost Hemenway $1,000

Augustus Hemenway of Readville paid $1,000 for a Polish flag yesterday, to Mme. Szumowska Adamowski, chairman of the Polish relief committee. This was the largest individual sum received by the committee from its state-wide sale of flags, the proceeds of which will go to the relief of the war sufferers in Poland.

The committee is elated over the success of "flag day," and it is believed that the sum raised in this manner will exceed $20,000. The campaign was under the direction of the Polish relief committee and the Public Interest League.

Boy Scouts handled the sales at the North and South Stations in an admirable manner. A large number of pretty girls distributed the flags and eagles at the subway stations. Society debutantes and matrons realized large sums in the lobbies of the hotels.

The Polish band gave a concert in the afternoon on the Common.

THE WEATHER.

Fair and colder today and Monday. Strong westerly winds.

Stone Bids Teutons Beware of Firing

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Senator Stone, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, said today:

"German ships firing on vessels in the new war zone would do well to be careful what vessel they fire on, or some one may shoot back.

"I know that a vessel like the Oregon in the old days, with a Clark in command, if attacked in this fashion, would reply promptly, regardless of who made the attack."

Senator Stone said he did not know whether this government would make any protest against the action of the German admiralty. He was emphatic in saying, however, that under this decree certain acts might make the situation "very serious."

Col. House on Mission of Peace

LONDON, Feb. 6.—London officialdom has heard that the mission of Colonel E. M. House, personal representative of President Wilson, who arrived on the Lusitania today, includes instructions to sound the opinion of the governments of the warring nations on the subject of peace.

The announced mission of Colonel House was to co-ordinate the various American relief organizations abroad. Now not only here, but in Paris, Berlin and Petrograd, it is reported that his visit, which will extend to the various capitals, is significant of a desire on the part of the President to renew an offer of mediation.

It is understood that the investigation will be conducted entirely through the United States embassies to the several warring countries. Colonel House, it is said, will make confidential reports to Washington on the progress of his mission.

There have been recent exchanges of representations between the United States government and the foreign offices of Russia and Austria, and it is rumored that these may have something to do with the significant visit of Colonel House.

Charles H. Webster Dies in Florida

NORTHFIELD, Feb. 6.—Word was received here tonight of the sudden death of former Representative Charles H. Webster of the Fourth Franklin district, who died in St. Petersburg, Florida, where he went a week ago to regain his health. He was forty-eight years of age and had been postmaster of this town for twelve years. He was past master of the Harmony Masonic Lodge, an past patron of the Northfield Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star. Eight years ago he was admitted to practice in the Franklin County bar. During 1912 and 1914, he served in the Legislature, having been elected on the Progressive ticket.

$40,000,000 Powder Order Reported

PENNS GROVE, N. J., Feb. 6.—Scenes of unprecedented activity, guarded by the strictest secrecy, were discovered today at Dupont's Carney powder plant by a newspaperman who eluded the guards. The working force has been increased from 500 to 5,500, and additional machinery costing $2,000,000 is being installed as a result of a great European war order said to be $40,000,000 worth of powder.

Man with Revolver Walks into Station

A young man, who for a time, it was thought might be the missing Harry Clark Coe, wandered into the Hanover Street Station last night in a dazed condition. He had a revolver in his hand, and said to Lieutenant Hurley: "Here, I want to give you this." He was unable to state his name, but was finally identified as George Lambert of Hillcrest street, Roslindale.

15,000 New Pupils in New York Schools

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Nearly 15,000 new pupils were admitted to high schools in Greater New York last night. This brings the registration in the city to 83,078.

LUSITANIA, FACING SUBMARINE PERIL, FLIES U. S. FLAG

Giant Cunard Liner, Warned by the Baltic that German Commerce Destroyers Were Lying in Wait, Dashes Across Irish Sea Under Protection of American Colors.

Use of Neutral Flag, Reported by Several of Her Passengers, Gives a Serious Turn to Controversy Growing Out of Berlin Charges Against the British Admiralty

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The controversy precipitated by German's charge that Great Britain secretly advised masters of ships to fly neutral flages when necessary for their protection against ships of the enemy took a serious turn tonight when it was reported from Liverpool that the Cunard Lusitania, from New York, crossed the Irish Sea flying the American flag.

The passengers of the liner were landed at Liverpool early this morning. The American emblem was still displayed when the ship made the port. The report that the British liner was flying an American flag was brought to London by an American passenger, who stated that the captain claimed the right of protection under the neutral colors because he was carrying neutral mails and neutral passengers.

WARNED BY THE LINER BALTIC.

The Baltic, of the White Star line, flashed the first warning by wireless to the Lusitania, saying two submarines had been sighted, according to this passenger.

When the Lusitania arrived off Queenstown, after being delayed by heavy seas which swept the decks, injuring a number of passengers, the ship's wireless became exceedingly active and messages were flashed from shore and sea. Finally, after cruising off Queenstown for about two hours, without even picking up a pilot, as is usual, the Lusitania laid her course for Liverpool and proceeded under a full head of steam.

It was just after leaving Queenstown that the American flag was noticed flying at her stern by the passengers. According to Will Irwin, the AMERICAN writer, a small American flag and a mail pennant also were flying at the forepeak.

Former United States Senator Lafayette Young of Iowa said it was generally accepted on board that the Lusitania was sailing under the American flag. He said, however, that he did not see the flag. Approached by numerous American passengers, Captain David Dow frankly admitted that there was grave danger from German submarines along the last stretch of the voyage. He said that while the ship was under American colors, no submarine would dare molest her, and the flag assured the passengers and ship of safety against attack.

RACED AWAY AT FULL SPEED.

Other ship officers admitted that there was no expectation that German submarines would be deceived by substitution of flags, for it would be impossible to conceal the identity of the Lusitania, but hostile submarine commanders would be deterred from launching torpedoes and thus the company's purpose would be served, protecting the neutral passengers' lives and preventing the loss of valuable neutral cargo.

Captain Dow smiling admitted that the reason he was racing at full speed from Queenstown to Liverpool was to prevent any hostile craft from getting close enough even to communicate an order to stop the ship for investigation.

While the British foreign office is without official confirmation of the action of the Cunarder's captain, the incident is looked upon as extremely unfortunate just at this time. It is intimated that the captain's act will meet with official disapproval. Indications are that official disavowal will be made that such a course had been advised in the case of the Lusitania or any other ship.

Any formal statement that may be made by the foreign office will be delayed until an official report has been received.

The Lusitania sailed from New York on January 30. This dispatch is the first intimation received that she was flying the American flag though a ship of British registry.

If the Lusitania did fly the American flag the German contention that the British Admiralty has secretly ordered British ships to fly the flag of neutrals apparently is borne out.

GERMANY WARNS NEUTRAL SHIPS

Merchantmen of Every Flag in Danger of Torpedoes in "War Zone."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The full text of Germany's warning to the world, a most remarkable war document amounting virtually to a threat of possible destruction of United States ships or any other neutral vessels, was made public by the State Department here tonight.

The waters around Great Britain, including the whole of the English Channel, are declared hereby to be included within the zone of war, and that after the 18th instant all enemy merchant vessels encountered in these waters will be destroyed, even if it may not be possible always to save their crews and passengers.

Within this war zone neutral vessels are exposed to danger, since in view of the misuse of the neutral flags ordered by the government of Great Britain on the 31st ultimo and of the hazard of naval warfare, neutral vessels cannot always be prevented from suffering from the attacks intended for enemy ships.

The routes around the north of the Shetland Islands, in the eastern part of the North Sea, and in a strip thirty miles wide along the Dutch coast, are not within the danger zone.

SECOND DOCUMENT.

Supplementing this, and explaining it in detail, came a second official document.

Officials of the State Department indicate plainly the belief of this government that it has a strong right to protest against any action on the part of the German government which will endanger American shipping.

Following is the full official text of the memorandum issued by the Imperial German Government concerning proposed retaliation against the measures taken England in violation of international law to stop neutral sea commerce with Germany:

"Since the beginning of the present war Great Britain has carried on a mercantile warfare against Germany in a way that defies all principles of international law. It is true the British Government has announced its intention of decreeing that the London declaration concerning naval warfare is binding on its naval forces, but it has also announced the declaration in its most important particulars, although its own delegates at the London conference on naval warfare had recognized its unreliability and had urged its international law.

"The British Government has put a number of articles on the list of contraband which are not so, or at most are only conditionally useful for military purposes, and, therefore, according to the London declaration, as well as to universally recognized rules of international law, may not be designated as contraband.

"As Great Britain has abolished the distinction between absolute and relative contraband, inasmuch as she has subjected to seizure all articles of contraband intended for Germany without reference to the ultimate use which they were to be unloaded or to the hostile or peaceful use they were to be put to.

"Great Britain does not even hesitate to violate the Paris declaration, as her naval forces have seized on neutral ships, German property that was not contraband, in violation of her own decrees concerning the London declaration.

"Further, she has, through her naval forces, taken from neutral ships numerous Germans liable to military service and has made them prisoners of war.

"Finally she has declared the entire North Sea to be an area of war, and if she has not made impossible the passage of neutral ships through the sea between Scotland and Norway, she has made it so difficult and so dangerous that the loss to certain extent effected a blockade of neutral coasts and neutral ports in violation of all international law.

"All these measures have the obvious purpose, through the most paralyzing of legitimate neutral commerce, not only of striking at the German military strength, but also at the economic life of Germany, and finally, through starving out the entire population of Germany to destruction.

"The neutral powers, generally, have acquiesced in the steps taken by the British government. Especially they have not energetically including the British government to resistance to German rights and property seized in violation of international law. In certain directions they have aided the British measures, which are irreconcilable with the freedom of the sea, in that they have obviously, under the pressure of England, hindered by export and transit embargoes, the transit of wares for peaceful purposes to Germany.

"The German government in vain has called the attention of neutral powers to the fact that it must face the question of whether it can longer persevere in its hitherto strict observance of the rule of the London declaration if Great Britain is to continue her course and if the neutral powers are to continue to acquiesce in these violations of neutrality to the detriment of Germany.

"For her violations of international law, Great Britain, despite the vital interests which the British empire has at stake and the neutral powers seem to satisfy themselves with theoretical protest.

"Therefore, in fact, they accept the vital interests of belligerents as sufficient excuse for every method of warfare.

"Germany must now appeal to these same vital interests. To its regret it therefore sees itself forced to military measures aimed at England in retaliation against the English proceedure.

"Just as England has designated the area between Scotland and Norway as an area of war, so Germany now declares all the waters surrounding Great Britain and Ireland, including the entire English Channel, as an area of war, and will thus proceed against the shipping of the enemy for this purpose, beginning February 18, 1915.

"It will endeavor to destroy every merchant ship of the enemy that is found in this area of war, without it always being possible to avert the peril that thus threatens persons and cargoes.

NEUTRALS ARE WARNED.

"Neutrals are therefore warned against further entrusting persons, passengers and wares to such ships. Their attention is also called to the fact that it is advisable for their ships to avoid entering this area for, even though the German naval forces have instructions to avoid violence to neutral ships in so far as they are recognizable, in view of the misuse of neutral flags ordered by the British Government and the contingencies of naval warfare, their becoming victims of torpedoes directed against ships of the enemy cannot always be averted.

ALL WATERS AROUND ENGLAND INCLUDED IN GERMAN WARNING

The waters around Great Britain, including the whole of the English Channel, are declared hereby to be included within the zone of war, and that after the 18th instant all enemy merchant vessels encountered in these waters will be destroyed, even if it may not be possible always to save their crews and passengers.—From text of Germany's Warning to Commercial Shipping.

KAISER RUSHES TO EASTERN FRONT

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Emperor William is hastening to the Eastern theatre of war, where Field Marshal von Hindenburg is waging the most desperate battle of the campaign in an effort to break the Russian armies.

Berlin today officially announced the departure of the Kaiser for the East. His exact destination, of course, was not stated, but it is assumed that he is going directly to the region of Bolimow, in Poland, where, thirty miles to the West of Warsaw, the Germans and Russians have for five days been engaged in a death grapple with appalling losses to killed and wounded.

Today's dispatches from the East say the battle is continuing "with unabated fury." Petrograd reports that the Kaiser's generals have massed a number of 16½-inch guns before the Russian lines in a last desperate effort to hurl back the Russian advance and smash a way through to Warsaw, but, according to Petrograd, the Czar's lines show no signs of wavering before the most terrific fire ever directed at an army. Whether or not the presence of the Kaiser and many high officers at the more successful efforts remains to be seen.

MAY OUTFLANK GERMANS.

While the battle of Bolimow continues, the Russians farther to the north have pressed forward andafter crossing the Bzura River, they are seriously threatening the Germans with an outflanking movement.

The struggle in the Carpathians is dragging on without any decisive turn. Broadly speaking, it appears that in the western half of the region the Russians are making progress, while in the eastern half they appear to have fallen back from the Lupkow and Beskid passes on prepared positions, where they are attempting to stem the rush of large Austro-German forces.

The Russian counter blow on the massed assaults of General von Hindenburg men is the most interesting development in British observers of the struggle in the east. It overshadows for the moment the operations of the Russians in East Prussia, and is taken in some quarters to indicate that they have ceased playing the role of merely holding their lines to the west of Warsaw and have detached from an effort to expel the invaders.

PANIC IN BOHEMIA.

An important concentration of Austro-Hungarian troops on the Eastern Galicia and Bukowina is under way, according to dispatches from Budapest today. It is evident that the Teutonic allies realise the vital importance of stemming the Russian advance into Hungary, owing to the fear and discontent that have taken possession of the Hungarian people.

In this connection importance is attached to a dispatch of the Exchange Telegraph from Berne, which says that a reign of terror is existing through Bohemia because of Austrian defeats.

Military law now prevails over nearly the entire province. There have been wholesale arrests of editors and politicians. In some instances the death penalty has been ordered.

Thus far there have been no organized revolts, the expressions of wrath of the population is extremely restless.

In the western theatre of war there have been no operations of importance within the past twenty-four hours, as far as the official reports reveal the situation. While Paris claims successes at some points for the allies' artillery, Berlin announces the repulse of French counter attacks in the Champagne and Argonne districts.

The German War Office officially denies that the Germans launched any unusual efforts to secure a victory over the allies on the Kaiser's birthday.

DECLARE CANAL SAFE.

The recent defeat of the Turks in Egypt, British war officials assert, assures the continued safety of the Suez Canal.

A private dispatch from Berlin says:

"The spirits of the Servian army and the Servian civil population is good. There is no scarcity of food in Servia. Ammunition is plentiful. The army now totals 200,000 men. It is declared that the Servian forces effectively has crossed the Carpathians and joined the Servian army."

More than a quarter of a million picked troops and many 16½-inch guns, heavy guns, Petrograd dispatches say, are engaged in the great battle along the Rawka and Bzura rivers in Poland.

For a week the heavy artillery has been shaking the blood-soaked earth with its thunder and the attacks of the Germans and the counter-attacks of the Russians have left the battlefield carpeted with corpses.

General von Mackensen, one of the most brilliant commanders in the German army, was selected by Field Marshal von Hindenburg to smash the Russian centre and open up the way for the drive the Germans are trying to make against Warsaw.

ALLIES AHEAD IN 6 MONTHS OF WAR; SAYS CZAR'S WAR MINISTER

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—Summing up the results of the war for the first six months, Minister of War Soukhomlinoff said today:

The developments of the first six months of the war may be considered as essentially favorable for the allies. The plans of the Germans, based on the hope of a rapid and decisive victory, have been radically checked. Still further, the offensive power of our enemies diminishes from day to day. We can wait with confidence the issue of a struggle which still may be long and bitter, but of which the result cannot be doubted.

With 100,000 picked infantrymen and 500 big guns under his immediate command General von Mackensen has locked with the Russians in a death grip the ferocity of which has not previously been known in the present war.

PLANNED TO EASE PRESSURE.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg planned to cause a withdrawal of the new Russian forces from their advanced positions in East Prussia, and to lessen the Russian pressure against the Austro-German force in western Galicia by striking a decisive blow at the Russian centre, west of Warsaw. If the Germans fall in their present assault upon the Russians the battle line will undoubtedly be pushed westward to the border of East Prussia. The Russian General Staff hopes that within the next fortnight German soil will be bearing the brunt of the heavy fighting.

But in the present conflict, which is raging over a front not more than ten miles long, the Russians have to reckon with the reckless valor of the Kaiser and his legions. Fresh troops have been dubbed the "death brigade," and each man has been warned that death must be expected. In spite of the blasts from Russian rifles, machine guns and heavy artillery, the Germans have attacked time and again with bravery which compels the admiration of their foes.

"Trenches have literally been filled with corpses until they offer no shelter for protection, and the Germans and Russians battled with bayonets in hand-to-hand fightings over the bodies of the dead. Over the frozen earth of the battlefield, now clothed with shrapnel and sprinkled with corpses, the tide of battle has swung backward and forward, but official dispatches from the front now declare that the German offensive has been checked.

Inspired by the presence of Czar Nicholas, who has gone to the Polish front, the Russians are countering all along the line.

The losses of the German legions are enormous. Within the past five days it is estimated 50,000 Germans have been killed, wounded or taken prisoners. The Russian losses were necessarily very heavy, but no figures were given out.

Again the superiority of numbers has come to the aid of the Russians. Tens of thousands of fresh Russian reserves have been hurled forward against the Germans in the past forty-eight hours to break down the resistance of the Teuton troops, whose endurance has been taxed to the utmost by the incessant fighting of the past week.

Petrograd Reports Gains for Russians

[OFFICIAL]

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—Russian detachments, engaged in reconnaissance in Bukowina, are successfully operating on the left bank of the Upper Rawka. They have captured a number of German patrols. During a battle at Borjimow the Germans tried to bring armored automobiles into action, but their efforts were repulsed.

In the German trenches the Russians captured infantry shields used by the men to defend themselves against Russian bullets. The Germans used a number of 15½-inch guns in the fighting between Sklinisko-Sice and Bolimow. Later the Germans threw a barrel bridge over the Rawka. Three companies crossed, over the bridge and were annihilated. The bridge was destroyed by Russian artillery.

Kaiser Leaves for the Eastern Front

[OFFICIAL]

BERLIN, Feb. 6.—New French attacks against the positions taken by the Germans north of Massiges, remain unsuccessful.

French activity in the Argonne also failed.

EASTERN THEATRE OF WAR—The Russians yesterday attacked on the East Prussian frontier and south of the Vistula. On the German front at Goumine, in the region of the Bzura River, all Russian attacks were repulsed. The Germans took 1,000 prisoners and six machine guns.

Especially from Berlin, but also from the French side, the bulletining has been made and continuously repeated that the Germans to commemorate the Kaiser's birthday, made attacks on a large scale and with great determination all along the line, but that all these were repulsed with heavy losses for the Germans. All official German dispatches bearing upon the operation of the day in question, prove that this allegation was flatly invented with perfidious intention.

FIRST BOSTON BOY DIES IN BIG WAR

Word has just been received in Boston of the killing in the French trenches of Robert Chapon, a Boston boy, who left this country August 21, and hurried to France in response to the call to arms.

This is the first known instance of a Boston man being killed in the European war.

"Bob" Chapon was only twenty. He was given a chance to avoid the firing line by instructing the young soldiers of the 1914-5 classes in the rapid use of bullets. In less than three weeks, after leaving the barracks, he was shot dead in the trenches near Verdun, gallantly defending the French colors.

Robert Chapon came to this country from France when fifteen years old. He worked two years and later studied at Amherst Agricultural College, which he left in January, 1913, to enter the employ of the William Filene's Sons Company, where he was assistant buyer of women's gloves.

When the war broke out he began to talk about his duty to his country. Some of his young associates advised him to stay in America, but he could not bear to hear his country was at war without doing his share in military duty.

When the young man took leave of his friends in the Filene store there was a pathos about it that was felt by all.

The official news of the boy's death was sent to his parents and then cabled to his sister, who is professor of French at Wellesley College.

Paris, January 16, 1915.

I duly received your favor of the 30th ult., regarding poor Bob Chapon and I am sorry to announce to you the very sad news that this poor fellow has been killed in the North, end of last month. He had done his duty like a real Frenchman and from what we hear fell fighting bravely.

When he came back to France his captain proposed to him to stay in the barracks to instruct the young soldiers of 1914 and 1915 class and he refused, saying that he wanted to go to the front to fight for his country.

Well, my dear Mr. McCurdy, these are the sad events of our war and unfortunately we begin here to be used to such news. We can only hope now that this terrible war will soon come to an end.

I could not wire you as we did not have any cable for your firm and I thought that you would learn this sad news early enough.

Hoping to hear soon from you again and with kindest regards, I am.

Yours very sincerely,

French Artillery Repulses Enemy

[OFFICIAL]

PARIS, Feb. 6.—There were no infantry actions on the day of Feb. 5, from Arras to Rheims there were artillery conflicts, which resulted in successes for our troops.

There has been no change in the situation in the region of Perthes and of Massiges.

In the Argonne and in the Wosvre there have been encounters. Our artillery dispersed convoys of the enemy and set fire to a train of twenty-three cars.

We destroyed a captive balloon within the German lines to the north of Somme-py.

11 P. M.

The only noteworthy facts which have been reported are the highly efficient fire of our artillery in Belgium and in the Aisne Valley and slight advance by our troops in Champagne, north of Massiges.

LONDON EDITORS DECRY BLOCKADE

LONDON, Feb. 6.—English newspapers in commenting today upon the "blockade" proclaimed by Germany around the British Isles and on the Northern coast of France, paid particular attention to the attitude of neutral nations toward the action of the German admiralty.

The Globe says: "Let the Kaiser add to the causes for irritation by sinking an American ship, flying the American flag, and drowning the American crew as they are proceeding upon their lawful way, and we will be very much surprised if the United States finds it any longer possible to remain neutral in a conflict which it has hitherto been so anxious to preserve.

"We do not deny that Americans had grounds for complaint against ourselves. But there is a difference between complexities arising from red tape and the dilatoriness of officials, and the, barbarism of inflated savagery.

"That is the meaning of the Berlin decree and we do not doubt that the United States has taken due note of the fact."

The Westminster Gazette says: "We have not the smallest desire to incite neutrals to hasty action. We are quite content that they should come to a decision by themselves. So far as this country is concerned, the German threat is universally treated as evidence of the fact that Germany is growing more desperate and we begins to realize that victory in this war is impossible and that defeat is more than likely."

The Evening Sandard says: "In the massive economy of the blockade of the British Isles, Germany made a distinct threat against neutral merchants. Indeed, neutrals have been quick to recognize their interest in this affair, being naturally indignant at the prospect of receiving blows when they are dealing none in return."

"Germany is in no condition to appreciate anything but her own point of view. She runs like a mad bull, tossing and goring those whom she wishes to retain as her friends as well as her foes."

Declare Russian Attacks Broken

[OFFICIAL]

VIENNA, Feb. 6.—In Poland and Western Galicia the situation is unchanged.

Russian attacks have been renewed at certain places in the Carpathians, but have broken down with heavy loss to the enemy. Our attacks are making the forces retreat. The number of prisoners taken by us in the Carpathians has been increased by about 4,000.

UNITED STATES NEDS A STRONG NAVY, SAYS KING LUDWIG OF BAVARI

America Safe from Neighbors, While Germany Is Surrounded by Powerful Enemies—"Germany Will Fight to Last Drop of Blood," Says Ludwig.

By EDWARD LYELL FOX.

Copyright, 1915, by International News Service.

MUNICH, Jan. 2, 1915.—"There will be no end to this war until we have peace conditions which we shall judge to be worthy of our nation and worthy of our sacrifice. This war was forced upon us. We shall go through with it. We will not be finished until we have an incontestable victory. The heart and soul of the whole country is in this fight. Between all the German kings and confederated princes, there is absolutely unswerving unity. We are one idea, one hope, one ideal, one wish."

With all the emotions of his sixty-nine years, the ruler of the Southern German Empire, King Ludwig of Bavaria, gave his declarations standing at the side of his royal chair as he talked to me today in Wittelsbacher Palace, Munich.

It was the first time he had granted an interview to an American correspondent.

King Ludwig of Bavaria is a soldier and carries a wound of 1866, which he proudly recalled.

"I have two sons at the front," he said. "Prince Francis, commander of a brigade, was wounded in Flanders, but will go back to the front, and Crown Prince Rupprecht, who is fighting in the west."

His Majesty had consented to see me and express his long felt friendship for America and that of his people, a feeling that was evident from his informal greeting and hearty hand shake, a compliment I felt sure he meant as a sign of the cordiality which he holds for our country.

Strong Bond Unites America and Munich.

"All Germany has been deeply touched by the many kindnesses of your country since the beginning of the war. You have been so thoughtful," he said.

"You have sent us your wonderful Red Cross doctors and nurses. Throughout the empire we have heard expressions of good will from your visiting countrymen. We have felt the spirit that prompted the gifts of the American children to the children of Germany.

"Especially have we been touched here in Munich, where your wonderful hospital is, and where we have so many Americans.

"Between Germany and the United States there exists a strong bond through commercial relations, but between your country and Bavaria there is something more intimate.

"It is because so many of your countrymen come here. They like the Wagnerfestspiel, they are so fond of German music and our Bavarian art. They like to spend their Summers among us. They get to know us and we them.

"You have no idea how many Americans live here in Munich. And they find here the high regard in which your country is held.

"They find that two of the best artists of their own nation, Miss Fay and Miss Walker, both Americans, are regarded as the best artists in the Munchen Opera, and our people hold them in great esteem. They are received in court society, and are very well seen."

The subject of America made the King enthusiastic. So I took the opportunity of asking His Majestic a question so many of my countrymen are thinking. What of America and war?

"America need fear no war," he replied quickly, adding, "No war on your own soil. Geographically you are safe. You have only two neighbors, Canada and Mexico." And the King smiled.

"We, on the other hand, are surrounded by enemies who are powerful. You have the Pacific between you and your adversaries."

Says United States Must Maintain a Powerful Navy.

King Ludwig's ouissson of the Atlantic Ocean struck me as being significant. He seemed to take it for granted that we could have but one adversary—that "yellow peril" of the Far East.

Whereupon I mentioned something which had come to me in Berlin concerning certain islands in the Pacific.

For a moment King Ludwig loked grave, and then he said slowly:

"America needs no large army; if she should need one she can make it quickly. She has already shown that. To attack her on her home soil is not practical but she should have a large navy. I have heard many compliments of your American navy, of its equipment, discipline and gunnery, but it must be kept large."

"So you think, Your Majesty, that we are safe from war?"

"On your home soil, yes," he repeated, "but your navy must be strong. When war will come, you can never tell. But you must never fear war.

"We knew over here that this war was coming. We have long known it. We have always wanted peace.

"For forty-one years I myself have been working for peace, but we have always been surrounded by jealous neighbors.

"Last January—the exact date, as I recall it, was January 27—I spoke at a dinner given in honor of the anniversary of the birthday of his Majesty Emperor Wilhelm II.

"I said then that we do not wish war, but that the German people have always shown that they do not fear war."

I reflected upon the European situation of January, 1914, to make King Ludwig talk at that time in a way which suggested the close proximity of this war. And I asked him concerning that situation.

"Yes, we knew war was coming," he admitted gravely. "Last Winter the great debates were going on in the French parliament over the question of changing the term of military service from two to three years. We could not understand that. The extra years would increase the annual strength of the French Army fully fifty per cent. It was ominous.

"Then we knew that Russia had nine hundred thousand men under arms whose term of service had expired and who had every right to return to their homes. Why were they not sent?

"Yes, we knew it was coming, but we did not fear it, and," His Majesty continued emphatically, "Germany will fight to the last drop of blood. You have but to see the spirit of our troops and the spirit of the recruits, disappointed because their offers to serve in the army are rejected.

"We do not need every recruit now, and as we do take new men, there are hundreds of thousands more, ready to serve the Fatherland—to the end."

"And when will the end be?" I asked His Majesty, "when peace would be declared?" The King smiled, but it was a smile of reluctance.

"Who can say?"

Instantly I thought of the Socialists. We had heard in America, I told His Majesty, that there could be no war. We had been told that the German Socialists would not let their country go to war, so now I asked the King why this was, and told him what we had thought about it in America.

The King smiled, for it was obviously inconceivable to him.

"We Germans," he explained, "quarrel between ourselves in peaceful times, but when we are surrounded by enemies we are one. And the Socialists know that war was as much against our plans as it was against theirs.

"In times of war Germany is always a united nation. Beside the Fatherland, dogmas are trivial. We Germans like to talk. We are great philosophers. We go deep into things, but it is against our racial instincts to let our own individualism come before the welfare of the state. It is because we have deep national pride that we are one people today."

"And, Your Majesty, after the war?" I asked. "What then? Is it to be the last war of the world, so terrible that humanity will not tolerate another?"

"That is for each nation to say," he replied gravely. "Our hands are clean. For more than forty years we have worked for the peace of Europe, and there have been times when, had our policy been such, it might have been to our advantage to go to war.

"Our hands are clean," he repeated. "They brought this upon us. We did not want it. After it is over we shall rebuild. I foresee an era of great prosperity for our country. We shall not be impoverished.

"Many of our industries are working day and night now. Until last August they were busy with the products of peace; now it is with the products of war. So many skilled workmen are needed today that we cannot take them from the shops to send them to the front, even though their regiments go.

"And after the war the factories will all go on as before, manufacturing the things of peace, and those other industries which are closed now will be doubly busy. War, no matter how severe it may be, cannot check the commercial growth of a country like Germany."

Further expressing again his warm feeling of friendship—a friendship deeper than that dictated by the ethics of mere international courtesy, he declared, for it has come from the Americans who have lived from time to time in Bavaria—King Ludwig concluded our talk with the message of Germany's deep and sincere friendship to the people of the United States.

We shook hands again; it was an American farewell. The dapper adjutant came into the room, and I bid His Majesty "adieu."

My last impression was of his straight uniformed figure standing in the centre of the room and bowing, a dozen orders across his breast, the Iron Cross and the Order of St. Hubertus included; then the oaken doors closed.

Back into the little ante-chamber with the countless paintings, back through the austere reception hall, past the white-coated, white-plumed Nartschier guards, down the great staircase, and with Legation Counsellor von Stockhammern, I was escorted into a motor.

URGE FALZONE BE GIVEN LIFE TERM

Counsel Calls at Jail to Cheer Convicted Slayers of Maurice A. Albertson.

Biagio Falzone, convicted of murdering Maurice A. Albertson, a Lawrence jeweler, in a shack in Wakefield, was cheered while he sat disconsolate in his cell in the East Cambridge jail yesterday by a visit from his counsel, Attorney J. W. Connolly. The lawyer told the prisoner, who is only twenty-three years old, not to despair and that a strong effort would be made to have the sentence commuted to life imprisonment. If this fails Falzone is doomed to the death chair.

He and Ignazio Morello, convicted of second degree murder, will probably be sentenced by Judge Irwin on Monday.

Today all the police who have been working on the case, including Chief Pollard of Wakefield, resumed their search for the jewelry stolen from Albertson, which is still missing. What he had with him when slain was valued at nearly $2500. Only a small part of the loot has been recovered.

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Removes all dandruff, stops itching scalp and falling hair.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or any dry hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this. For sale by Riker-Jaynes and all good druggists.

Hot Tea Breaks A Cold—Try This

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the Germans folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacupful at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold at once.

It acts gently, opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Advertisement.

Memories of Lincoln Told by Hubbard

An interesting address upon Abraham Lincoln by Elbert Hubbard, enlivened with personal reminiscences of the martyred President, was the feature of the two hundred and twenty-first meeting and dinner of the Beacon Society of Boston, held at the Algonquin Club last evening with an attendance of more than eighty members.

"Lincoln," declared Mr. Hubbard, "was infinitely wise and not absurdly good. He did not pretend to be pure in heart than everyday men and he possessed to a marked degree that most precious quality, a sense of humor. I was born in the Lincoln country, and I cannot remember the time when the name of Lincoln did not stand to me for something greater than any other name in the world.

"Lincoln knew well the human heart; he was thoroughly human himself and he bound men to him with hoops of steel. If he were alive today he would be a constructive lawyer, probably a corporation lawyer. He had the faculty of getting men together and he won men, juries and courts to him by his own specific gravity, by his own charm."

Louis A. Coolidge, president of the society, was toastmaster and those at the head table, in addition to the presiding officer and Mr. Hubbard, included ex-Governor Eugene N. Foss, Josiah H. Benton, J. Nelson Parker, George R. White, one of the vice-presidents of the society, and Morris Gray, president of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, who was present as the guest of Mr. White.

Give Labor a Chance at "Oxford 7000"

Call "OXFORD 7000" if you have any opportunity of giving labor to the unemployed. The committee appointed by Governor Walsh to promote work succeeded in placing several during the past week, but many names remain on the list seeking employment.

Equal consideration is given the call for several men or women, or for one person, and no trade is unrepresented. The necessity is to get work now that otherwise would be on the Spring list is urged on the householder.

Order your Spring clothing now to give labor to tailors and milliners.

Booms Bay State Apples and Trees

At the Twentieth Century Club meeting yesterday E. Cyprus Miller of Haydenville came out strong for the New England apple, particularly the Massachusetts Baldwin. He said: "This climate of New England is a congenial one for raising apples. The shorter the season, the better the flavor of the apple. There is no apple that can compare with the Baldwin of Massachusetts.

Harris A Reynolds of the Massachusetts Forestry Association said: "Our farmers are cutting their timber twice as fast as it can grow. We should plant white pine. One-fifth of the land in this State produces nothing. Tree planting would reduce the taxes from 25 to 10 per cent."

Women Directors on Farm Bureau

Four women were elected to the Board of Directors of the Norfolk County Farm Bureau, organized at the court house at Dedham yesterday. The women directors are Miss Isabella McIntyre, Mrs. Theodore R. Kitson, Mrs. Hattie R. Day of Norfolk and Mrs. Ida F. Pales of Wrentham.

County Commissioner Evan Richardson was elected president. Among the prominent Norfolk County men elected directors were Allan Forbes, Everett M. Bowker, Sheriff Samuel H. Capen, Hartley M. White and Harold M. Bullard of Bellingham.

COMMITTEE ON RULES BATTERED

Disheartened Republican Board Promises to Declare an "Alibi" in Defence.

Inflicted on one hand by a progressive Democracy and batted on the other by insurgency in its own ranks, the Legislative Committee on Rules has assumed a forlorn and disheartened appearance.

Wherefore the committee has risen in all its majestic and partisan power, has taken its pen in hand and has begun to frame an alibi in its own defence.

Should it carry out its declared intention, it will tell the "people" its "attitude" on the proposed investigations of the submerged reveal of Gerry Brown and the pardon, other parole, granted to John A. Hall of Southbridge.

The intention to declare this alibi is the first progressive indication that the Republican Committee on Rules has manifested in the two-score years it has been intrenched in legislative power.

POLITICAL PURPOSE.

Unconcerned by the justice or injustice of Mr. Brown's removal or of Hall's pardon, the committee gave the opponents of the Governor ample opportunity to besmirch the motives of the popular chief executive in repeated public hearings and then voted that the investigations should not be undertaken. The charitable disposition to accept hearings in Mr. Brown's behalf was tainted with a political purpose and ill assumption. Mr. Brown was identified with democracy for years and during his active campaigning days delivered his eloquent oratory to a persistent attack on the conservatism of the Republican party. It was a labor of love of Mr. Brown.

Having voted in the negative, the committee then decided to apportion a triumvirate of its members to prepare a statement descriptive of its "attitude."

Fitz Henry, Jr., of Boston, a member of the committee, suggested that a statement was necessary to advise the people that the committee regarded the proposed investigations "seriously."

So far as the political Methusalehs can determine, this is the first time that the legislative committee on rules has ever prepared a document outlining its "attitude."

To augment the troubles of the Rules Committee, three successive and distinct defeats were accorded it in the House of Representatives.

The committee reported unanimously in favor of an investigation of the military preparedness of the State, an investigation sponsored by no less notable Republicans than Former Governor Curtis Guild and Former Secretary of the Navy George von L. Meyer. And the House defeated the order in such a decisive manner that when the committee's secretary "coubted" vote, Speaker Cox passed him the "high sign" not to doubt.

The committee reported adversely on an order to investigate the contractual relations between the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company. And the House tipped over the report.

HOUSE TURNED IT DOWN.

The committee reported an order to increase the sessions of the House to a Friday afternoon meeting. And the House turned that down.

In parliamentary parlance, the Legislative Committee on Rules is occasionally referred to as the "Steering Committee" or "Kitchen Speaker's Cabinet." It is a committee appointed by the Speaker, and of which he is chief. The committee intended to conserve the principles of the dominant power and to "steer" the principles through safe and unobstructed legislative course.

The troubles about to confront the committee lay dormant until the party leaders sentenced the Governor's effort to oust the New Bedford License Commission, perpetrated by "Charlie" Ashley, and the new Mayor's desire to drive the liquor interests out of New Bedford, the power to drive out the "back-room" dives and drive out the institutions that were said to be associated with the moral practices.

Speaker Cox received an epistolary appeal from W. W. Crapo, a Republican, an ex-Mayor of New Bedford and its most prominent mill owner and financier, to leave his rostrum and engage in the debate against the Hathaway bill. Speaker Cox did not leave the rostrum. But Representative John H. Shurburne of Brookline, the House leader of the Committee on Rules, otherwise the "Speaker's cabinet," went up and down the line and corralled a sufficient number of "conservatives" to defeat the bill.

Acting under the leadership of Speaker Cox, the standpat element of the Republican machine then and there delivered its first blow at Lieutenant-Governor Grafton D. Cushing, the anti-machine candidate for Governor. Mr. Cushing and Senator Andrew P. Doyle of New Bedford, an adherent of Cushing, who sponsored the Hathaway bill, were walloped by the party club at the same time and in the same place. The Hathaway bill precipitated the machine fight against Cushing that will continue until the votes are counted on election day.

Clubwoman Sued for Slander

Dance Hall Folks Ask $10,000

Mrs. Anna F. Priest, Waltham clubwoman who is sued for slander.

Actions Against Mrs. Priest Outcome of Negotiations to Hire Nutting-on-the-Charles.

Mrs. Anna F. Priest of Waltham, president of the Waltham Woman's Club was yesterday served with papers in two suits, each for $5,000 damages, charging her with slander.

The suits are the outcome of negotiations between Mrs. Priest, representing the Women's club, and the owners of a dance hall at "Nutting-on-the-Charles" which the club wished to engage for a "Gentlemen's Night."

The owners of the hall, the Nutting-Pullman Company, brings one of the suits. Royal A. Towle, an employe of the company, brings the other, on the general ground that remarks made by Mrs. Priest were damaging to the reputation of Towle and of the company.

The dance hall is open through the Summer months and is a popular place for automobile parties, but in Winter it opens only for an occasional special party. The Women's Club, through Mrs. Priest, arranged to secure the hall for a dance two weeks ago. Towle, as an employe of the company, ordinarily acts as usher or cloakroom attendant.

According to the facts as they have come to light, Mrs. Priest and two members of the club went to the Nutting-Pullman Company two days before the dance to ask that Towle be instructed to remain away from the club on the night of the dance.

Concerning exactly what passed at that conference, none of those who participated will say. But it is known that the company refused Mrs. Priest's request, and that Towle was at his regular post of duty during the club's ball.

The slander suits, it is understood, are based upon Mrs. Priests' remarks at this conference.

The managers of the Nutting-Pullman Company refused yesterday to discuss the case. Towle, likewise, had nothing to say. Mrs. Priest declined to see a reporter.

When papers were served upon Mrs. Priest by Deputy Sheriff Leslie, The Priest's lawyers against her as an individual, and not as an officer of the club.

Mrs. Priest is a woman of prominence in Waltham, active in club life, of middle age. She is the wife of Herman E. Priest, a Waltham business man.

Real Estate Agent Arrested for Theft

John E. Mahon, thirty-eight years of age and living at No. 18 Fairbury street, was arrested last night by Inspectors Lynch and Mitchell of police headquarters on a warrant charging him with the larceny of $450 from John L. Riley on August 18, 1912. Riley is a real estate dealer and it is alleged as an agent for him, Mahon secured the money. He is also of a South End lodging house.

DYNAMITER HORN WEEPS IN JAIL

Bridge-Wrecking Prisoner Breaks Down Over Prospect of Visit from German Minister.

MACHIAS, Me., Feb. 6.—Werner Horn, the young German who tried dynamite the International bridge at Vanceboro, spent his first day today in Washington county jail here. He is to serve a, thirty-day sentence for causing damage to American property at Vanceboro. In the meantime the Department of State at Washington is expected to come to a decision on the question of Horn's extradition to Canada.

Horn broke down only once. When it was suggested that a local German minister visit him in his cell tears came into the prisoner's eyes. This was followed by silent weeping for several minutes.

Horn was given a suit of the striped jail clothing. He smiles frequently, but apparently under this happy exterior there is a good deal of sadness which comes to the surface occasionally.

He had no appetite for supper yesterday. All he took was a cup of strong coffee and two glasses of cold water. His thumb, which was badly frozen, was paining him. He appeared fatigued and said that he was tired.

Sheriff Woodman said:

"Horn is no crank. I had thought so, but I have changed my mind since seeing the man. He is bright and seems to know thoroughly why he committed the deed. I shall take every precaution while Horn is in my charge to have him safely guarded nights. So far I do not know what will be done with him ultimately. His sentence is thirty days. Then he will have to serve unless a writ of habeas corpus should accomplish his release.

St. Stephen, N. B., is but forty-five miles from Machias and many of the people here belong across the border and are not in sympathy with Horn.

It is quite an amusing sight to watch Horn when being questioned. He will converse quite freely until one presses him in regard to his standing in the German army or when asked to give the names of any persons whom he had met while in New York. Although he answers other questions readily enough, despite his imperfect knowledge of English, these questions seem for reason to vex him and he will shrug his shoulders and say:

"Ah, no, I don't understand."

Horn said he would not have been here if he could have got back to Germany. He said he had tried twice to get back but could not.

PLAN FOR JEWISH WAR RELIEF DAY

Meetings to Be Held Throughout Greater Boston; Committee Acknowledges $32,011.92.

The New England branch of the American Jewish Relief Committee for sufferers from the war, of which Louis D. Brandeis is chairman, is planning to have a Sunday set aside to be known as Jewish War Relief Day on which meetings will be held in all parts of Greater Boston.

At a conference for the purpose of discussing plans for the Jewish War Relief Day was held yesterday at the Elysium Club. Charles B. Strecker presided. The speakers included Louis D. Kirstein, vice-chairman of the New England branch of the American Jewish War Relief Committee; Joseph M. Herman, David A. Lourie, Abraham E. Pinanski, Alexander Brit, Isaac Harris, Jacob de Haas, and Leo J. Lyons.

The women's committee is endeavoring to arrange that all the collections in all the synagogues for one month shall be devoted to the $250,000 that is being raised by the New England Jews to relieve the distress of unprotected Jews in the war-ridden countries of Europe.

The Hebrew residents of Salem will hold a mass meeting at the Song of Jacob Synagogue, Essex street, Salem, tonight to raise funds. There will be several notable speakers. The Boston people who will address the meeting include David A. Lourie, president of the Federation of Jewish Children; Abraham Alpert, editor of the Boston Jewish American, and Alexander Brit.

Abraham Kopeland of No. 501 Summer street, Boston, treasurer of the New England branch, reported a long list of contributions yesterday, among them $50 from ex-Governor Curtis Guild.

1,200 Appeal to Congress to Set Thaw Free

MANCHESTER, N. H., Feb. 6.—Another move to help free Harry K. Thaw has been started in this city by Walter M. Lang, a real estate dealer and insurance man. Early Friday, Lang started the circulation of a petition asking Congress to have Thaw set free, and up to an early hour tonight had succeeded in securing over 1,200 signatures. Upon the completion of the petition it will be forwarded to Congress.

Billie Burke to Reappear Thursday

The Hollis Street Theatre will not re-open until next Thursday evening. It has been expected that Miss Billie Burke, whose illness caused the house to be closed after the performance of "Jerry" last Tuesday evening, would have recovered sufficiently so that the engagement might be resumed on Monday evening. Word was received from New York, however, yesterday afternoon, that her physician insisted upon her taking a few more days additional before resuming her professional work, and for that reason the house will remain dark until Thursday evening.

Most encouraging reports come from New York concerning the condition of the popular actress. She is rapidly gaining strength and it is now positive that she will be able to appear in "Jerry" at the Hollis Street Theatre for the performance on Thursday evening. Those who had purchased seats for the first part of the week, may have their seats exchanged for later performances, or the money may be returned upon application to the box office, which is open as usual each day.

Former Governor Guild Recovering

Curtis Guild, former Governor, who has been suffering from an attack of laryngitis, is recovering and should be about again by the middle of this week, according to his physicians.

Uncle Sam Sends His Soldiers and Sailors

To the Hot Springs of Arkansas, for the Relief and Cure of Rheumatism and Blood Disorders.

(See List Below)

The great Army and Navy Hospital located here reports ninety per cent. of its patients as being restored to duty. This is a fair indication of the certainty of cure or relief that sufferers may expect.

Many years ago, when Thomas Jefferson was President, the U. S. Government awakened to the fact that the Hot Springs of Arkansas was one of the most valuable assets in America for the curing of human ailments. All of these springs and all of the land for 10 miles around were set aside and became a part of reserve, and are under the direct control and supervision of the Government.

It is now comprehended by tens of thousands upon thousands of lives that have been saved through the healing powers of these springs.

The waters are so charged with radium—known technically as radio-activity—that they accomplish wonders in the cure of diseases that would under other treatment be considered incurable.

The ailments that most readily yield to the baths are Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Malaria, Locomotor Ataxia (rarely cured), Bright's Disease (when not too far advanced), Liver and Bladder troubles, Skin and Blood diseases, troubles peculiar to women, and other troubles of a nature kindred to those above mentioned.

Regarding these springs as America's greatest gift to the sick, the Government has never allowed them to be exploited for private gain. The prices charged for the baths are strictly regulated—hotel charges are extremely low — and every consideration is shown the visitor.

The city of Hot Springs is one of the most delightful resorts to be found anywhere in the world, and its visitors are by no means confined to those seeking health.

The best of hotel accommodations, ideal surroundings, a picturesque mountain scenery, with drives made perfect by U. S. engineers, all contribute to make this an ideal resort of America.

Splendid facilities for all outdoor sports, excellent tennis courts, one of the finest golf courses in America. Bess Bell Parks, etc.—the Government has provided thousands of visitors from all parts of the country. Here they will find rest, comfort, enjoyment and health.

UNTERMYER RAPS MORGAN CONTROL

In Letter to Industrial Commission, Urges Better Public Oversight of Railroads.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The Federal Commission on Industrial Relations adjourned its session today to meet in Chicago, next month. The commission is investigating the Rockefeller, Carnegie, Cleveland and Baron de Hirsch foundations.

In a letter to the commission today Samuel Untermyer reiterated his statement, denied on the witness stand before the federal industrial commission by Jacob Schiff and J. P. Morgan, that "potential and eventual control of the majority of the great railroad systems of this country is under the domination of two great banking houses in the city of New York and their allies and associates."

Mr. Untermyer said in part:

"There are fifty-six railroad systems in the United States of over 1,000 miles in length each. These great systems together own 203,852 out of 253,565 miles of railroad in the country that are represented in all by 239 railroad companies. There have been $1,351 miles of roads reorganized since 1890 in bankruptcy proceedings, of which I find that over 50,000 miles was accomplished under the direction of these two banking houses. The two banking houses referred to are J. P. Morgan and Kuhn, Loeb & Company.

"There is now 43,295 miles in the hands of receivers." Mr. Untermyer continued, "or otherwise undergoing reorganization, readjustment or change of management, of which I find that 21,000 miles and upwards are headed for like control.

He takes this shot at the Morgans:

"The domination of these same interests and their associates, more particularly the Morgan-Baker interests, over the coal industries of the country and especially in the anthracite region, is still more imminent than is their control over the railroads.

"They have been potent factors in the ultimate decision of the policy to be pursued with respect to every great general coal and railroad strike for the past ten years.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your Kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally says a well-known authority, because meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Advertisement.

"100 to Urge Billy Sunday to Come Here"

One hundred Boston ministers and laymen will leave this city February 21 and call upon "Billy" Sunday in Philadelphia on February 22 and urge him to Boston, to hold a religious campaign some time in the Fall.

It has been intimated to the Boston committee that Sunday is willing to change his plans in the interests of Boston, as he thinks he is greatly needed in this locality. While he has plans for two years ahead he has made them subject to change.

"Billy" Sunday has the unanimous indorsement of the Evangelical Alliance of Greater Boston, of which President L. H. Murlin of Boston University is the head. This organization is composed of all the evangelical ministers of Greater Boston.

Inquiry in Death of Eight at Home

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—A Grand Jury investigation of conditions which led to wholesale murders in the German Odd Fellows Home, near Yonkers, has been ordered by District Attorney Weeks, who will have charge of the inquiry into the case today. The District Attorney said he would lay the evidence before the Grand Jury on Monday.

This afternoon Coroner James P. Dunn of Westchester County took the first steps towards having the bodies of the victims exhumed. Dunn said he was convinced that eight of the aged inmates of the home were murdered by an orderly, Frederick Mors. Mors has confessed he chloroformed the eight inmates to "put them out of misery."

As a result of the coroner's preliminary hearing four persons are now detained. Mors is in the psychopathic ward of Bellevue Hospital under the observations of doctors. Adam Bangert, superintendent of the home, is locked up at Mile Plains as a material witness. Mrs. Ring and Fritz Reichert, orderlies at the home, were detained as witnesses at the Yonkers police station.

"Toodles" Trial Resumed Tomorrow

The trial of Elizabeth M. Reed's $50,000 breach of promise suit against Henry K. Mansfield, proprietor of the Ferncroft Inn, will probably be resumed tomorrow.

Peter J. Feeley, the juror whose illness has caused a week's delay, is recovering, according to his physician, and Judge Fessenden has postponed that case until 10 o'clock next Monday in order to be able to appear in his place in the 30th Jury room tomorrow morning.

The other members of the jury, the court officers and Judge Fessenden united in sending Feeley a great basket of flowers to cheer up the sick man. Feeley lives at No. 916 Albany street and has been suffering from lumbago.

Books of Missing Union Man Found

Two account books and some receipts, which had been in the possession of Thomas Crockan, financial secretary of the Railway Trainmen's Union, who has been absent from his home at No. 7 Dudley street for two weeks, have been found floating on the harbor surface near Federal street bridge, and are in the hands of the police. These books and papers constitute the first trace of Crockan since the police were notified of his absence.

Miss Martin Bride of K. W. Hayward

Catherine H. Martin, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Martin, last evening became the bride of Kenneth W. Hayward, of Roxbury. The wedding was performed at the home of the bride, No. 111 Humboldt avenue, Roxbury, by the Rev. Winfred Peabody, of Saint Peter's Episcopal Church, New York, a friend of the groom. After a honeymoon tour in the South, the couple will reside in Roxbury.

Rockefeller Senior Collects $5 Fee

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., the richest man in the world, today collected $5 in fees for testifying before the federal commission on industrial relations yesterday, although he had not been subpoenaed. Mr. Rockefeller appeared voluntarily and unexpectedly. He received $2 for testifying and $3 for mileage between this city and Tarrytown. The money was paid by the United States government.

OPPOSE CHANGE IN NAME OF 'PRIDE'S'

Fashionable Colony Greatly Perturbed Over Offer of Station by Judge Moore.

Pride's Crossing it has been for almost 200 years and Pride's it will always be, if the old residents of that fashionable resort and wealthy Massachusetts home estates at Pride's Crossing are among the show places of the North Shore, have anything to say about it.

Sentiment among the descendants of the first "Peter Pride," after whom Pride's Crossing was named, and Bostonians, who have built the magnificent homes that dot the shore, are strongly against the proposal to rename the railroad station in honor of Judge William H. Moore, of New York, the millionaire horseman, whose estate "Rockmarge," is one of the finest in the region.

He proposes to present to Beverly a splendid stone depot to take the of the present wooden one, which has been declared out of the way for a line, if his name can be attached to the station, in place of the historic name of Pride.

CALLS IT 'CHILDISH.'

"It is the most childish thing I ever heard of," said F. L. Higginson, president of the Suffolk Savings Bank, who owns the estate originally belonging to Charles C. Paine, one of the first of the Boston men to have a Summer residence at this fashionable resort.

"I have known Pride's Crossing for years," he added, "and there is no doubt but that this proposal will arouse general discomfort."

The postmaster, Elisha S. Pride, is a direct descendant of the first Peter Pride, who traced his lineal descent from the brother of Colonel Pride, who broke up the long Parliament in England. He is opposed to changing the name.

Pride's Hill, rising in back of the station, where the farmhouse of Peter Pride, originally stood, is now the estate of Mrs. James F. Curtis of Marlboro street.

Mrs. Curtis has not as yet expressed her opinion on the proposed change, but Miss Mary Curtis, who lives with her at her Marlboro street home, declared that she felt quite certain the sentiment of the Boston contingent of the Summer colony would be in favor of the old name.

Miss Katherine P. Loring and Miss Louisa P. Loring, whose grandfather, Charles G. Loring, was among the first Bostonians to choose the place for a residence, characterize the suggestion as an "outrage."

Among the first Bostonians to seek out Pride's Crossing as an ideal Summer resort were Franklin Dexter, Sydney Bartlett, Howland Shaw and Sewall Tappan, all prominent in Boston society half a century ago.

PRICK IN THE COLONY.

In the last few years, the exclusive Summer colony has been augmented by wealthy visitors from New York and Pittsburgh, among the most prominent of whom is Henry C. Frick, whose mansion is equalled by few.

"Hookmarge," Judge Moore's estate, is on the Paine reserve, with a fine frontage on the water. Across the railroad tracks on Hale street he has a driving park and stables, all included under the name of "Rockmarge." Many of his blue ribbon horses have commanded admiration in New York, London and Paris, and he has recently purchased a new million-dollar place in New Jersey, on which to raise his favorites.

He is looked upon by the old residents as a "new comer," having up his residence there but fifteen years ago.

Another descendent of Peter Pride, who frowns upon the name of "Moore's Crossing," is Miss Lydia Pride Ober, who lives with her brother, Jonathan Ober, near the Prick estate, part of which belonged originally to them.

Adds, from the historic associations Pride's Crossing was the favorite spot of Oliver Wendell Holmes, who sang of it in some of his poetical verses as "Pride's Near the Crossing."

Among the other well-known estates which have given Pride's Crossing an enviable reputation as a fashionable resort are those of such prominent Bostonians as Judge William Caleb Loring, Quincy A. Shaw, Dr. and Mrs. Franklin Dexter, Ellis L. Dresel, Washington B. Thomas, Philip R. Sears and John Taylor Spaulding.

Miss Spalding Becomes Bride

Malden Society at Nuptials

MRS. EDWIN L. BURNHAM, FORMER MISS SPALDING

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Wheeler Spalding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rawson Spalding of Hotel Somerset, Malden, and formerly prominent in Chicago society, to Edwin Lewis Burnham, son of Mrs. A. S. Burnham, No. 20 Francis street, Malden, took place in the First Universalist Church, Malden, at 7:30 o'clock last night, the Rev. Richard Eddy Sykes officiating.

Nearly a thousand friends of the young people were present. The ceremony was one of the most brilliant social events in Malden this season.

Both the bride and groom are prominent in Malden and neighboring cities. The bride is a graduate of Oak Park, Ill., High School and Kerry Hall finishing school, Lake Forest, Ill. She is also a Bradford Academy girl.

The groom was graduated from Malden High '05, Harvard University '87 and is now engaged in the furniture business in Boston. He is a member of the Harvard Club, Bellevue Golf Club of Melrose, the Pi Eta Club, Theta Delta Chi of Harvard, the Merrimac Valley Country Club and the Kernwood Club of Malden.

At a dance of the Bellevue Golf club on the eve of their wedding, Mr. Burnham and Miss Spalding were the winners of the "Lucky Prizes," and as they approached the platform to receive the silver gifts, the orchestra played the wedding march, amid the laughter of their friends. Then they were showered with confetti.

EXPOSE OF SHIP TRUST PLANNED

Federal Government Prepared for New Fight if Filibuster Succeeds in Congress.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—If at any chance the filibuster against the ship purchase bill should prove successful, the administration will return to the fight in a way that is expected to bring from the people a demand that the measure be passed in the next Congress. This was done by a public investigation designed to uncover the machinations of the shipping trust, and to show the people the position that is being practiced on them which the administration bill is intended to end.

The federal government is in possession of evidence to prove the existence of a shipping trust, or at least a combination of most of the transportation lines through the medium of rate agreements. It is this combination controlling freight rates which the administration proposes to fight by the establishment of a government owned merchant marine.

The evidence shows that practically all the well known lines entering North Atlantic American ports with those of the United Kingdom, north Europe and the Mediterranean are parties to numerous freight agreements covering nearly every ship here of the American foreign trade. Other agreements exist covering trade to all other parts of the world, and still different agreements cover the passenger trade to all ports.

In the trans-Atlantic trade, the important lines are members of four main freight conferences. There are at least eighty steamship agreements and conference arrangement covering the foreign trade routes of the world.

All the agreements and arrangements of which the federal government has knowledge show one unmistakable purpose, the control of all competition between the lines, which are parties to the agreement or conference, and (2) competition from lines which are outside of the conference.

MARSHALL FIELD WEDS AMERICAN

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Marshall Field 3d, the richest boy in the world, and Miss Evelyn Marshall met this city were quietly married this noon by Bishop Hayes. Announcement was made late this afternoon by the bride's mother, Mrs. Charles H. Marshall, at her residence. The bride had been in with grip and there was a report yesterday that the bridal might have to be postponed.

Marshall Field, 3d, of London and Chicago, grandson of Marshall Field, the Chicago merchant prince, is heir to a fortune which is expected to exceed in the aggregate sum of $100,000,000 when the beneficiary comes into full possession.

The descendant of the Marshall and Ferdinand Field families of Manhattan, is known considerably for his part in Chicago's social world, while even she was abroad but she started soon to her native land hearing of it.

It is supposed that Marshall Field, 3d, has been educated in England was returning recently on the Lusitania, the very vessel which brought back the wounded and fatherless Miss Marshall.

Much interest in the situation in which Cupid revels, young, beautiful, an social swing and open-handed as the bride, the suddenness of its coming and the arrangement was announced by Mrs. Marshall not long ago that the two families settled in New York.

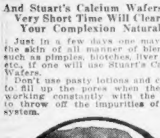
You Owe Your Face a Good, Clear Skin

And Stuart's Calcium Wafers in a Very Short Time Will Clear Up Your Complexion Naturally.

Just in a few days one may clear the skin of all manner of blemishes such as pimples, blotches, liver spots, etc., if one will use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

Don't use pasty lotions and creams to fill up the pores when they should be working constantly with the blood to throw off the impurities of your system.



"Before I rid my face of pimples I was not thought to be pretty, but all the change I made was to clean my blood and skin."

Many a face is made with beautiful contour and artistically lined, but when the skin is disfigured one cannot see the beauty of the face lines. One notices only the skin blemishes.

It's because pimples and eruptions come from the inside—from impure blood—and you can't cure them by rubbing stuff on the outside of the face. Purify the blood and the blemishes will disappear.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will often clear the complexion in a few days' time. That's the reason they get off it—they act right off—in a hurry. That's because they're made of just the ingredients needed to neutralize poisons and impurities from the blood. That's why doctors prescribe them so constantly.

You will speedily enjoy a beautiful complexion if you use these wonderful little Wafers. Your face will become as clear as pure as a rose as other likes to have pimply-faced people around. Stuart's Calcium Wafers don't take a week or two months before getting results. Even some have results within a few days. Just one dose invariably effects a change. Then the whole system will feel better. You will sleep sound and eat with a relish—a marvelously short time.

Miss Garmong Still Works for $1 a Week

BANGOR, Me., Feb. 6.—Although a verdict for $116,000 has been awarded Elizabeth L. Garmong against John R. Henderson, Jr., Harvard graduate, multi-millionaire clubman of Washington and Summer resident of Bar Harbor, in her breach of promise action just tried in this city, the young woman is now working as a dressmaker in the family of Horace Gross, a local real estate agent, at Orono on Whiting Hill, three miles out on the Ellsworth road beyond Bangor.

In return for her services she is getting $1 a week and her board and what is far more important to the young unmarried mother-to-be, out of her four-year-old child, named for Mr. Henderson.

She is desperately poor and it will be necessary for her to pursue the most frugal economy, also as soon as the Maine law courts have known its decision and either assent or set aside the largest verdict ever given by an American jury in a similar case.

Yale Men Receive Social Week Guests

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Feb. 6.—Yale today began receiving its guests of the university's annual social week, although the new faculty rule forbids any of the festivities from actually beginning before Monday. Crowding the events into two days will keep the hundreds of guests, who will come annually from every State in the Union, on the continent of Europe, and the addition of two athletic events has provided an innovation whose success will be watched with interest. The Yale-Dartmouth hockey game Monday and the Yale-Columbia basketball contest Tuesday will provide a feature for social week never before injected into it.

Four Overcome in a Steam Bath

A steam bath proved to be too much for four men at the bath house of Hyman Miller at No. 47 Chestnut street, Chelsea, yesterday afternoon. The men were Sigmond Makovits, Joseph Sarvirij, John Makovits and Andrew Kitchen of No. 15 Auburn street, Chelsea. They were found unconscious. The police and Dr. Gollob who had been notified were soon on the scene with a pulmotor. The men were sent to the Frost Hospital, where they recovered. They had had their first experience in a steam bath. They were not used to it.

Wells Club to Put on Minstrel Show

The annual minstrel show of the Wells Social and Dramatic club will be held Tuesday evening in Wells Memorial Hall, No. 985 Washington street. The club is under the direction of Patrick Fenno. Although several shows have been put on by the club in recent years this one promises to be the best.

Songs will be given by Miss Gertrude Reynolds, John Downing, Grace Carlson, Thomas Ahern, James Connolly, Gene O'Connor, dancing and singing, Theodore Marcy, Mildred Welch and Gladys Dingwell. The opening chorus is made up of thirty-five young women and men. Miss Reynolds and John Downing will sing a duet and the solo together, "I can't stop loving you now."

A violin solo will be tendered by Alexander Goodwin and there is a specialty number by Miss Brimick and Alice Goff.

TO EXTEND CIVIL SERVICE.

ALL ENDORSE U.S. MAIL EDUCATION

College Heads Stand with Walsh for a State Correspondence School.

A distinguished gathering of Massachusetts educators assembled in the Council Chamber at the State House yesterday to hear Governor Walsh explain in detail his "State Correspondence School" idea and to help the Governor with suggestions.

The conference was held at the suggestion of Governor Walsh. Among the visitors were: Dr. Richard Cabot, of Harvard Medical School; Dean Ropes of the Harvard extension courses, President Hibbard of Tufts, President Burbank of Wellesley, Principal Arthur L. Williston of the Wentworth Institute, Director Waller H. Cowling of the Franklin Union, Superintendent Challoner of the Fitchburg public schools, Director Meyer Bloomfield of the Bureau of Vocational Education, Mr. Bernard J. Rodwell, President Arnold C. Jackson of Technology and Chairman Frederick P. Fish, Mrs. Ella Lyman Cabot and Jeremiah Burke, both of the State Board of Education.

At the close of the meeting Governor called the "most encouraging meeting" held at the State House thus far in his term of office. All present declared their intention to be present at hearings on the Governor's inaugural message recommendation before the legislative committee on education.

COMMITTEE TO DRAFT BILL.

The conference adopted, by unanimous vote, a resolution requesting the Governor to select from among those present a committee of five, to draft a bill providing for

"In my address to the Legislature," said Governor Walsh, "I urged the adoption by Massachusetts of such a system of university extension, including correspondence schools, free lecture courses and departmental publications, such as has already proved of wonderful value in many of the States to the West, and particularly in the great progressive State of Wisconsin.

"It is my belief that Massachusetts should do more for those of her boys and girls who, because of conditions in the home, have been compelled to leave school at 14 or 15 years of age. My attention has come to me since I made this recommendation that more than 50,000 a year goes out from Massachusetts to correspondence schools, and that 90,000 out of one and two years have at one time and another been registered in these schools.

"We already do all we can be expected to do for the children of school age. We are able to send them through the schools. The time has come to do something for those of other States, we should help those who have been unable to go to high school, college or professional school."

CONSIDER NEEDS FIRST.

While there were no differences of opinion regarding the basic value of the Governor's idea, Chairman Fish of the State Board of Education, suggested the advisability of giving some thought to the cost to the Taxpayers of the State and spoke of the probable expense of such an innovation.

"But," said Governor Walsh, "if the question 'can we afford it?' is to be raised, I desire to raise another question, 'can we afford longer to be ignorant?' Can we certainly consider the matter of expense, but we must not be unmindful of the educational needs of the people. We can, nor blind to the value and great helpfulness of such a school. My own judgment is that we can begin here, in a small way, with an initial appropriation of from $50,000 to $100,000.

Dr. Bumpus of Tufts, agreeing with the Governor that the great need of the Massachusetts educational system is to reach those who are compelled by economic conditions to leave school at too early an age, exhibited a chart showing the enormous falling off in school attendance at the age of fourteen.

"That is a matter of vital importance to all the people of the State," said Principal Arthur L. Williston of Wentworth Institute, has been presented in recent years."

Professor James Hardy Ropes, dean of the University Extension school of Harvard, promised the support and the hearty co-operation of the colleges and, while pointing out that the details of the proposal required careful consideration, heartily endorsed the project.

STATE BOARD BACKS GOVERNOR.

Mrs. Cabot expressed gratification at seeing the Governor of the Commonwealth taking the lead in such a matter as Chairman Fish declared that the State Board will be glad to co-operate behind the Governor's plan. Mr. Fish will personally present the subject to legislative committees.

Mr. Burke of the State Board, assistant superintendent of the Boston schools, called the meeting the most profitable and illuminating he has attended as an educator. Mr. Burke spoke of the "tragedy" of Massachusetts boys and girls having to leave school at fourteen. "Society," he said, "having sent these young people out upon the sea of life unless, should come to their rescue."

"The first practical suggestion I have heard," said Mr. Rothwell, "towards the solution of our immigration problem." Mr. Rothwell and all othe others gave the project their hearty approval in terms similarly enthusiastic.

No that—this for the benefit of all who have inquired—Governor Walsh discussed State correspondence schools at length in an interview with AMERICAN—it may not be too long before ambitious men and women may have a college brought to them by the occasional use of postage stamps and the firm determination to "get somewhere and be somebody."

Why Cadum Is Good for Skin Diseases

The important thing in treating many skin diseases is to keep water away from the inflamed parts and make the covering as air tight as possible. This, according to a very distinguished New York physician, seems to kill the germ and set up the healing process quickly. Cadum, this well-known skin remedy, supplies that kind of a covering and keeps out the germ. This covering contains no petrolatum and white wax, which Cadum contains. Two other ingredients of Cadum are zinc oxide, which dries up the water that comes from the sores, and oil of cade, which is one of the oldest and best-known remedies for eczema. Physicians everywhere smile at oil of cade more often, perhaps, than any other one thing in treating eczema. Cadum gives the for a trial box, while the 25c box contains nearly four times as much as the 100 size.

3 Canton Sisters Betrothed

All Within One Month's Time

Somewhat unusual is the engagement announcement in a single month of three sisters, the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Blanc of Rockland court, Canton.

The engagement of Miss Ethel Josephine Blanc to Alfred F. Kolson of Roslindale was announced at Christmas time. Miss Henrietta Mae Blanc announced her engagement to George W. Pfeiffer of Allston at New Year's. Miss Lea Eugenie Blanc, who is the youngest of the three, announced her engagement to William Simmons of Roslindale on her nineteenth birthday, several days ago.

At each betrothal announcement a score of girls were present from Canton, Roslindale, Milton and Allston. Since the announcement they have been showered with congratulations and many social affairs have been given in their honor.

They are all musical as well as being fond of out-of-outdoor sport. They graduated from the Canton High school.

Miss Ethel Blanc will be married in the Spring, but the other sisters will wait until later in the year.

ASKS PITY FOR THE POOR RICH

No Hardships, Flo Vining Says, to Compare with Dividends That Are Passed.

That "hard times are felt by the rich more than any one else" is the somewhat revolutionary statement made by Miss Floretta Vining, of Hull and Beacon Hill, well known as the editoress of a flourishing agricultural of South Shore newspapers.

The suffering of those who wait for semi-annual dividends on their stock investments, only to find at the eleventh hour that because net profits have been able to send them the directors have voted to pass (i. e., "skip") the dividend, is pointed out by Miss Vining in the leading editorial of the current issue of the Hull Beacon. Chatting editorially of "Patriotic News," Miss Vining writes:

"The week of April will find all the ladies connected with patriotic societies. There is a new administration in Washington which is not liked by the ladies of Massachusetts. Most of the Chapters have voted to give nothing more to Continental Hall, and they will get nothing from this staff.

"There is a large company of ladies going to Washington this Spring. The Chapters are not giving much this year and are not making anything. Hard times are felt by the rich more than anyone else. One lady had five dividends passed October 1, and nine January 1. If one is comfortably housed, fed and clothed they have accomplished much this Winter. There is a meeting every Monday at the Red Cross headquarters, where the ladies meet and talk over coming events. It is a social hour and agreeable they go out but very little.

"Mrs. Theodore Bates of Worcester is honorary vice president and she has not been down to Boston this Winter. Her daughter, Typhosa Bates Batcheider, is a French subject, although a daughter of the American Revolution. The Chapter meetings are mostly held at the principal hotels. There will be good lunches for fifty cents and there is always a good entertainment which is creditable.

"Railroad fares are now cheaper, although the times are so hard no one pays out money unless they are obliged to, and it makes it very hard for those who have to work. The D. A. R.'s feel very poor this year. It is astonishing how one's friends will drop away, thereby they do much good for several societies and they are always of help to the community. This year will see much accomplished."

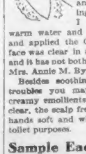
WHEN THE TIME COMES

To move you naturally want to find the best vacancy. It will be found in the Boston American New Monthly Renting Register, which comes out Sunday, February 15. It will be FREE.

ITCHY RED PIMPLES SPREAD ON FACE

Large as Boils. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, Itching Stopped, In Three Months Face Clear, Not Bothered Since.

7 Lowcraft Ave., Brockton, Mass.—"My trouble began on my face with pimples. They were very large, some of them as large as boils and were red and itchy. I had a good many and they came to a head. They itched very badly at night and when I scratched my face they spread.



"I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and the itching stopped immediately. I washed my face with warm water and Cuticura Soap, dried it and applied the Cuticura Ointment. My face was clear in about three months' time and it has not bothered me since." (Signed) Mrs. Annie M. Byrnes, August 3, 1914.

Besides soothing and healing all skin troubles you may rely on these supercreamy emollients to keep the complexion clear, the scalp free from dandruff and the hands soft and white if used daily for all toilet purposes.

MRS. AYER WINS FLOWER PRIZES

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner Also Gets Awards at Horticultural Exhibition.

Mrs. Frederick Ayer of Commonwealth avenue won an award for vegetables, as well as flowers, at the mid-Winter exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Flower Show which opened yesterday, at which several hundred people were entertained. A large crowd is expected today. The show is being held in the lower hall of the Horticultural Building, and a wonderful array of flowers, plants, fruits and vegetables are on hand.

The prizes and gratuities awarded by the judges were divided among several exhibitors, but Mrs. Ayer received three prizes for plants and flowers, and gratuities.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner received five first prizes and four third places, while Mrs. William Whitman received four first prizes and four second division places. Both of the winners won two prizes in some of the classes where they exhibited flowers.

Mrs. Gardner received awards for her exhibits in the begonia gloire de lorraine; primula sinensis; primula malacoides; primula obconia; Roman hyacinths; polyanthus narcissus; cyclamen; and specimen plant in bloom.

Among other prize winners were Eben S. Draper, W. W. Edgar, R. A. Clark, Mrs. Lester Leland, Miss Cornelia Warren, William Whitman, Duncan Finlayson, J. T. Butterworth, S. J. Goddard, A. A. Pembroke, John A. Nelson.

Gratuities in the flower division were awarded to Mrs. Frederick Ayer, Eben S. Draper, Walter Angus, W. W. Edgar, William Whitman and Miss Cornelia Warren.

Mrs. Gardner was presented with a certificate of merit and M. A. Patten received honorable mention.

Hebrews Seek Right to Labor on Sunday

Permission to engage in secular business and labor on Sunday is sought in a bill presented to the Legislature by the United Hebrew Orthodox congregations of Boston and vicinity. The bill would permit labor to be performed and business to be transacted on Sunday by all persons who "conscientiously believe that the period from sundown on Friday night to sundown on Saturday night is 'ought to be observed as Sabbath'"

JITNEY BUSSES COME TO BOSTON

Latest Transportation Wrinkle Doing Rushing Business to South Boston Dock.

JITNEY.

He rode he rode in taxis and he rode by trolley,
And he tried it on shanks's mare;
They're so cute, he exclaimed, "By Golly,
Sure, and I'm getting there."

But when he tried the jitney,
He left himself to some
As he put-put-another sign
Is that modern passenger hog.

—Jitney Jingles.

Hoch der jitney busses!
They've coms to Boston.
Jitneys?
Just so. They're here, perhaps, to make Boston bigger, better and "busey-er"—who knows? But they're here, are the jitneys, the latest transportation wrinkle.

Why jitney?

Jitney is slang for nickel, and they're jitney busses because it costs a nickel to ride in one.

FEVER RAGES OUT WEST.

Out in the West the jitney bus fever rages. Cities by the score have taken them up. They call it the jitney bug, and now Boston has them.

There are three lines of jitney busses, all operating between T Wharf and the new Commonwealth Pier in South Boston, with stop-off privileges at Rowe's Wharf. Most any day one can hear the following confabbing at the jitney terminal or at the Rowe's Wharf way station:

"Going over?"

"Think I will."

"Let's wait for the jitney."

"Here she is."

(Illusions of toot-toot-tooting of horns.)

Jitney chauffeur: "Going, over? Going over? We're next. We're next. Going right away. Only a few rooms. Come one, come all."

BEATS HOOFING IT.

That's the way it's going down on Atlantic avenue every week day—T wharf to Commonwealth docks traffic is just one jitney after another.

People are used to hike it now ride in the jitneys. They say that bussing it is certainly all to the merry compared to hoofing it.

There are seven auto busses operating on the jitney lines. George E. Fitzpatrick of East Boston operates three cars, the Rockett Taxi Company operates two, and John Rhodes operates two.

The busses run on a twelve-hour day basis. They start in at 6 a. m. and 6 p. m. At certain hours in the morning they roll up in front of Rowe's Wharf, and the commuters around Commercial street are hopped in. Fish pier wards pile in. The busses bring them back in the afternoon.

All in all, the jitney in Boston seem to have a busily busy time of it.

BECOMING AN EPIDEMIC.

Los Angeles has more than 1,200 jitney busses, going day and night. Kansas City has a fleet of jitneys. Out in Chicago the other day the first jitney in that city brought out such a crowd that mounted policemen had to keep the spectators away from the bus. And it was such a gala event that they put it in the movies.

Scores of other Western, Southern, Eastern and Pacific Coast cities are introducing jitneys, and one news dispatch says: "The jitney fever is becoming an epidemic."

MAMMA, DADDY AND CHILDREN ALL LOVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

A delicious cure for constipation, billousness, sick headache, sour stomach, indigestion, coated tongue, sallowness—take "California Syrup of Figs." For the cause of all this distress lies in a torpid liver and sluggish bowels.

A tablespoonful tonight means all constipation, poison, waste matter, fermenting food and sour bile gently moves out of your system by morning without griping. Please don't think of "California Syrup of Figs" as a physic. Don't think you are drugging yourself or your children, because this delicious fruit laxative cannot cause injury. Even a delicate child can take it as safely as a robust man. It is the most effective stomach, liver and bowel regulator and tonic ever devised.

Your only difficulty may be in getting the genuine; so ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Say to your druggist, "I want only that made by the 'California Fig Syrup Company.'" This city has many counterfeit "fig syrups" so watch your step. Buy Riker-Jaynes and all good druggists.—Advertisement.

Ex-Ambassador Hill and Wife Honored at Society Fetes

David Jayne Hill, ex-ambassador to Germany, who arrived in Boston Thursday to give a series of lectures at Boston University on "The State, the Law and the Citizen," was the centre of social hospitality last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill have taken an apartment on Dartmouth street, as they will be in Boston until February 20.

Mr. and Mrs. Basil King gave a dinner in their honor Friday night at Cambridge.

Last night Mrs. Charles E. Inches of No. 338 Beacon street entertained them with a dinner in their home.

Tomorrow night Mr. and Mrs. Hill will be at the Charlestown navy yard as Commandant and Mrs. Rush's dinner guests.

There will also be banquets in honor of the former diplomat.

On the evening of February 11 the Boston University Law School Association will tender Mr. Hill a banquet at the American House.

The Boston City Club tendered him a banquet on the evening of his arrival.

The dates of his lectures are February 11, 12, 18 and 19 at 3 o'clock on each of those afternoons.

Tell Police Fortune and Are Arrested

Mrs. Mary Floris, thirty-five, and her daughter, Catherine Floris, aged seventeen, gypsies, who have been living at No. 227 West Fourth street, South Boston, for the past few weeks, were arrested last evening, specifically charged with the taking of 50 cents, the property of the two police officers.

According to the police, the women have been making a living "telling fortunes." Last evening two plain clothes men went into the house, and after paying 25 cents each to have their fortunes told, arrested the pair.

Colder Weather Is Due Here Today

Do not prepare to discard that overcoat or heavy underwear, for although the ground hog failed to see his shadow on Candlemas Day, the winter season is not going to leave for a while, according to the weather forecaster, who predicts that it will be colder today and tomorrow.

Late last night the mercury started on the decline, after a moderate temperature of three days, during which period the snow deposited in the early part of the week, melted, resulting in much slush.

Fifteen Arrested in Gambling Raid

Fifteen men were arrested yesterday afternoon in a gambling raid at No. 103 Sumner street, East Boston. While several officers guarded the street, others entered the building, where the police claim to have seized a number of playing cards. The men were booked on the charge of being present where gaming implements were found.

SURPRISE DUE AT LAUREL 'ANNUAL'

Senator Joseph Leonard Expected to Make an Important Announcement.

They were saying up in the South End last night that Senator Joseph Leonard was to make an important announcement at the "fifth annual" of the Laurel Social and Athletic Association in Berkeley Hall, Berkeley and Tremont streets, Tuesday evening.

Just what the announcement is could not be learned by members of the organization. But a remark dropped by one of the "Glass Tumblers' Association" in "Little Johnny" Sheehan's "one man club" in the vicinity of Dover street, was that Leonard's pet candidate for the House nomination in Ward 9 next year would be a "dark horse."

Other dark horses in the House fight are numerous, and the two "Little Johnnies" now are in the militant Democracy in the "halls of legislation" and the fight to a finish with the Leonard "dark horse" at the pole.

Politics will not be the only gossip at the "fifth annual" of the L. S. A. A. The committee of arrangements has prepared a number of other gossips, one of whom will announce different dances. If you don't believe it, ask any of these stalwart Laurelites who comprise the committee of arrangements: Joseph Leonard, Representatives John Sheehan and John Donovan, small of stature and big of mind; Representative Joseph Murray, Walter J. Ring, Robert J. Bowers, Daniel Donoghue, Edward Franeljein, Coleman Riley, no relation to Big Tom; James J. Brennan, Thomas P. Sullivan, Edward McGuinness, George W. Devine and Joseph L. Murray.

The Laurels would not live up to their name if they did not invite such men as Mayor Curley, Councillor John J. Attridge, Robert A. Woods of the South End House, City Clerk James Donovan, former Congressman John A. Keliher, Thomas P. Dwight, Representative James H. Murphy, a neighbor of Mr. Bowers, and Joseph Ferreira, all of whom have received embossed invitations.

Duffy's Claims Are True

MR. WM. ANDERSON, SR.

About a year ago this gentleman said:—"I was suffering from grippe and thought I never could be helped. I can truthfully say Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has done me a lot of good—more good than anything else I've tried before. It is surely a medicinal whiskey and worthy of all that you claim it to be." He is over seventy years of age and Duffy's good qualities today. In a recent letter he said,—"I am still using Duffy's; my health has improved and I am pleased to recommend it." Appreciate Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and bless the day I started to use it."—Wm. Anderson, Sr., 283 Prospect St., Perth Amboy, N. J.

DIPLOMATS PLAN TO QUIT MEXICO

Washington Anxious About Acute Situation in the Mexican Capital.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Administration officials and the diplomatic representatives of foreign governments here were keenly watching for developments today in the acute situation at Mexico City, where many members of the diplomatic corps threaten to quit because of serious friction with the Carranza government.

The advisability of united action for the withdrawal of all foreign legations in the Mexican capital because of the difficulty of code communication and the alleged disrespect shown them by the Carranza authorities already has been suggested to their home governments by diplomats of some leading European nations.

This would leave the interests of foreign countries in Mexico in charge of consular officers, thereby virtually severing diplomatic relations with the Souths republic.

A critical feature of the situation is the threatened deportation of the Spanish minister for affording asylum to Angel de Caso, confidential agent of the Spanish government, accused of complicity in the Villa movement.

General Carrahna has no intention of parleying in any conference or assembly intended to consider governmental affairs nor will he enter into a compromise of any kind with his enemies. He made this clear in a dispatch today to Villista Arredondo, head of the local constitutionalist agency. In part he said:

"I will continue to ignore any group calling itself a convention or congress or assembly that may attempt to meddle with the government of this country irrespective of the fact whether it is civilian or military.

"When peace is restored I shall call a congress properly elected by all the citizens, which shall have the character of the constitutional congress to the end that it may enact all the reforms that during the struggle and give them the validity of constitutional provisions."

The State Department received dispatches indicating that conditions in Mexico City are serious because of a proclamation that all Villa and Chihuahua bills are worthless.

This has caused great suffering among the poorer classes, which generally hold the money.

$11 A MINUTE FOR MISS FARRAR

Ellis of Boston Secures Star from Metropolitan for Concert Tour.

Geraldine Farrar has forsaken the Metropolitan Opera House, and to the lure of a salary that figures something like $11 a minute, she has contracted to appear upon the concert stage.

This was definitely established late yesterday, after a day of guessing as to which of several rumors was the right one. The contract is with Charles A. Ellis, business manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The story of how the singer came to sign the contract which will take her away from the New York audiences has its touch of feminine pique. Miss Farrar's contract with the Metropolitan expires in April. It contains no clause giving the Metropolitan a further option on Miss Farrar's services.

Therefore, Miss Farrar, not unnaturally, expected that early this season steps would have been taken toward offering her a new contract.

WAITS VAINLY FOR GATTI.

Accordingly, she waited, through November, and then through December, and still there was no word from Mr. Gatti that he wished to assure her work for the Metropolitan for the season of next Winter.

Meanwhile, Mr. Ellis had made an offer of a large salary for "concert and opera work" during the season of 1915 and 1916; and at length Miss Farrar calmly "took him up" on the proposal. Mr. Gatti's first intimation of the state of affairs came with word that Miss Farrar had signed a contract with Mr. Ellis.

Mr. Gatti, apparently, found the news surprising and perturbing, and rushed to Miss Farrar to demand, "Why?" and "Why?" and again "Why?"

Thereupon Miss Farrar smiled upon the gentleman and replied something like this, "It is true, sir, that I prefer opera to concert work. But since you made no offer of a new contract, I found it wise to accept another offer."

METROPOLITAN LOSES.

"But we must modify your contract so that you may appear here?" Mr. Gatti insisted." The singer referred him to Mr. Ellis, who assured Mr. Gatti that Miss Farrar's time was already almost entirely engaged. Therefore the Metropolitan must swallow its luck and do without her.

Mr. Ellis in Boston was jovially ready to admit that he had secured Miss Farrar under contract. He said:

"I have a year's contract with Miss Farrar for next season. The contract is for concert or opera."

"Will Miss Farrar sing opera?"

"The contract calls for opera or concert work."

TO MAKE EXTENSIVE TOUR.

It was learned, as a matter of fact, that Miss Farrar will make the most extensive concert tour, she has ever made in America, going clear across the country to the Pacific coast. She may appear as "guest" with opera companies in different cities, and will be heard in Boston with the Symphony, and in concert work.

Mr. Ellis, who has secured her services, is also manager of Mr. Kreisler and Mr. Paderewski.

Kaiser and Gen. Joffre Drop in on Harvard '01 Dinner

Whole Armful of Iron Crosses Are Distributed

THREAT TO SERVE WRIT ON TRENTINI

Constable with Bill Caused Excitement for a Time at Shubert Theatre.

Constable William McDonald, armed with a writ of attachment for a bill of $47 against Enguo Trentini, created excitement among the Shubert Theatre officials last night during the performance of "The Peasant Girl," in which Trentini stars, by informing George Blumenthal, the prima donna's manager, that he would jump from a theatre box to the stage and make personal service upon the singer while the show was in progress unless his bill was settled.

Trentini was informed of the situation and implored to agree to pay the bill, but in vain.

The petite little singer back in her dressing room stamped her feet, shook her head, snapped her jet black eyes and simply said, "Not now, not me!"

"But you only have to go to jail," wildly expostulated Mr. Goldstein, "You must, Madame."

"But I will not! Nevaire! No. It is preposterous—robbery; let heem serve his Infernal writ. What do I care?"

Manager Blumenthal finally declared that he would pay the bill from his own pocket rather than run further risk of having the performance interrupted, and ordered his secretary to hand over the cash to Constable McDonald.

Head Master Casey Guest at Banquet

Head Master John F. Casey, who retires in September, was the guest of honor at the annual banquet and reunion of the members of the class of 1894 of the Boston English High School, which was held at the Boston City Club last night. Addresses were delivered by Masters Charles F. Adams and Malcolm D. Barrow. The following officers were elected: President, Dr. Hyman Michael; vice-president, Arthur C. Killian; secretary-treasurer, Robert T. McCance; executive board, E. L. Pratt, Edward Rose and Theodore R. Lockwood.

Says Germany Will Yield by Summer

PARIS, Feb. 6.—"Ten thousand troops lost and $13,000,000 expended has been the Germans' daily war toll during the past six months," said Francis Laur, the famous statistician today.

"At the same time Germany is paying double prices for all important commodities," he continued. "I don't believe the German people can soon be reduced by famine, but the scarcity of gold and the vast accumulation of her army will be bound to make had admit defeat by next Summer."

Clever Impersonations, Rapid Surprises, Real Hens and Paper Mitch Cow Add to Merrymaking.

Kaiser Wilhelm and General Joffre dropped war stuff last night long enough to run over to Boston and attend the annual banquet of the Harvard Class of 1901 at the University Club.

They came in after the eating, thereby indicating that hunger had not driven them from the field.

Henry Maguire, the "boy soprano," disguised as a messenger boy with occasional telegrams, announced the Kaiser, the General and other notables.

There was a stir when the Kaiser arrived. He was complete, costume, upturned moustache and all. He said:

"Just arrived in a Zeppelin."

He distributed iron crosses among a score of banqueters "for bravery." He saved a "gold" cross for Carroll D. Swan, the toastmaster, for being one of the bravest men Harvard ever produced to preside at class banquets.

"The German army," said the Kaiser, in conferring, "would be greatly strengthened by Harvard men, who would make the Allies look like Ellis."

IMPERSONATED BY PALMER.

Henry Palmer was the one who impersonated the German ruler so merrily. Hardly had he finished left when "General Joffre" was announced in the messenger boy.

The French commander is Henry Shaw in real life. He gravely made Joffre's famous quotation, "Ils ne passeront pas," and then, with iron crosses, like the Kaiser had distributed, but feminine wearing apparel, Toastmaster Swan received a garter with becoming modesty.

There was a barnyard scene staged in the reception room before the banquet began. Real hens cackled in an entryway. A cow, papier mache brand, was attended by "Bob" Goodwin as milkmaid, George Canterbury and Philip Coyle were farmers.

Many banqueters kindly tipped a "Goodie" or scrubwoman, who laboriously mopped up the corridor as the men came in. Later they found "Larry" Watson gleefully counting over dimes and quarters he had taken in.

HEAD TABLE BIDS.

The majority of the banqueters received personal letters directing them to sit at the head table. When they went into the banquet room every table was labelled: "Head table," except one, which was the real "head." There were about 100 sitting down, including a squad of class members who came over from New York for the fun.

Henry F. Hurlburt, Jr., disguised as Percy Haughton, the Harvard football coach, made a speech on football, insisting that he had moving pictures to illustrate it. All the audience could see was a square of light, with no picture showing. Hurlburt armed with a pointer, dilated upon the Yale bowl and the Harvard-Yale games which christened the Bowl last Fall.

"It was hard to get these pictures," explained Hurlburt, "because they all represent Yale carrying the ball."

Hurlburt was gracefully introduced by Toastmaster Swan as the man "who knocked 'U out of Yale."

A young man in a wig and spectacles, presented as "Charley Brickley," was doubled until he snatched off the wig and "specs" and revealed the real Brickley. He promised a good Harvard football team for next year.

MINSTREL SET.

Lights went out for a moment. When turned on they revealed a minstrel "set" at one end of the hall, with Irving Morse as interlocutor and John Somes and Henry Shaw as "Mr. Bones" and "Mr. Tambo." Personal quips were handed out unsparingly.

Henry Maguire, the "boy soprano," sang "Lovely Alice," Watson and chorus leader. Carl Ellison played piano accompaniments.

With much mystery, the distinguished visitors from "abroad," and other features, the time went in a flash.

The banquet committee which brought up and put on the "stunt" included John Somes, chairman; Henry Hurlburt, Jr., Arthur Gilbert, Theodore Sweetser, Irving Morse, Henry Shaw and Theodore Little.

Conferences to Guide Girl Pupils

The Women's Educational and Industrial Union of No. 264 Boylston street is arranging a series of conferences to guide girl students in securing professional positions. The program includes a talk on February 16 on "The Stenographer in the Law Office" by Attorney James E. Hall, librarian of the Somerville Public library, and on March 2 by Professor W. F. Sedgwick of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Mexicans Petition Leaders for Peace

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 6.—Avoiding all reference to any counter revolution in Mexico and hinting only of a possible appeal to the United States to use its influence to secure peace in that country, the Mexican peace conference, attended by nearly 2,000 Mexicans, today began and concluded its sessions by sending telegrams to revolutionary leaders urging them to lay aside personal ambitions and aid in settling the differences that arise as the basis of the continued warfare.

Brookline to Vote on Record Fund

At the town meeting next month Brookline will vote upon the largest appropriation in the history of the town. The annual appropriation called for is $2,413,239.17, of which $45,000 is to be borrowed. In addition to this appropriation, a special appropriation is asked for amounting to $225,305.7, of which $169,302 is to be borrowed, making a total appropriation of $2,175,239.11, and $114,363 additional to be borrowed.

Princess Vilma Sued by Banker

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The Princess Vilma Lwoff-Parlaghy today was named as defendant in a suit to recover $187,421. The plaintiff is Carlo Wedekind, a German banker, of Nice, and now a prisoner of war.

Wedekind's complaint asserts that the money is due for sums loaned and services performed as business agent. The princess contends that the complainant has charge of property for her which is of more value than his advances to her.

Miss Cameron Wins $20,000 Verdict

CINCINNATI, Feb. 6.—A jury today rendered a verdict of $20,000 for Miss Jeanette Cameron, short story writer and Chautauqua lecturer against Miss Cora M. Dow, the "Chain of drug stores" magnate of the leading society figure. Miss Cameron charges Miss Dow's stores furnished her poison under the guise of selling her a harmless medicine. Miss Cameron told on a stretcher in court while she heard the verdict.

20 Dead, 4 Missing in Mine Explosion

FAYETTEVILLE, W. Va., Feb. 6.—Twenty dead and four still missing is the result of an explosion today in a mine of the New River Coal Company at Carlisle, near here. One hundred and sixty-eight miners were entombed by the explosion. The greater number escaped.

'L' STATION BILL HEARING FEB. 23

There will be a hearing on February 23 at a time to be given before the Committee on Street Railways upon the bill offered by former Representative James T. Kenney, of Ward 21, for a Boston Elevated railway station at or near the junction of Dale and Washington streets in Roxbury. This is a district in which the population is congested.

It is believed that 150,000 people would be benefited if the road builds a station in the locality designated.

The bill provides that the Boston Elevated shall provide such a station within two years, if the bill is passed, from the date of enactment.

Burton Holmes on "The Allied Powers"

The subject of Burton Holmes' next travelogue at Symphony Hall, Huntington Hall next Friday night and Saturday afternoon, will be "The Allied Powers." Mr. Holmes, the toastmaster of the occasion, will be "Tuesday and Wednesday" and "Thursday and Friday" nights. Mr. Holmes has grouped together a most marvellous collection of new pictures and colored views, which will bring to the stay-at-homes all the genius of the present day in developing conflict without any of its actual hardships. There will be Indian soldiers from England, France, Belgium, Algeria, Japan, Russia and Servia, as well as the royal families in motion of the Czar, the President of France, the Queen of the Belgians, the King of England, Sir Edward Grey, Lord Roberts, Lord Kitchener, Baden Powell and Churchill, who has "gone over the top." It is no possible way could an American see at one time so many of the world's history-makers in half a lifetime as they can see in two hours at Burton Holmes' "Travelogue on The Allied Powers."

Cottage Park Yacht Club Dinner

The annual banquet and entertainment of the Cottage Park Yacht Club was held last night at the club house building in Winthrop. The toastmaster was Commodore John W. Pepper of the club, who introduced the following speakers: Senator Edward C. H. Bagley, who made the statement during the course of his remarks that this is to be his last year in the Senate; Representative Fred T. Whittier, Commodore Fred H. Wells of the Winthrop Yacht Club; Secretary Nathaniel T. Freeman of the Pleasure Park Yacht Club, and Commodore Frank Foynton of the Point Shirley Yacht Club.

Corn-Mad? Use "GETS-IT," It's Sure

Makes Corns Vanish Like Magic!

A hard cap of skin makes up every corn. When you put 2 drops of "GETS-IT" on it, it shrivels up and comes right off—and there's your corn vanished, thunder! Simple as taking off your hat! That's why corn-millions have a wild love for "GETS-IT"—nothing like it ever known before. Folks in this day, putter around with bandages, "tricks" and "dodges" and "pulling" salves, gouge corns out with knives, and, as a result, make them bleed and then bowl because they suffer pain. Use "GETS-IT" instead. There's nothing to do but apply 2 drops. The work is done. "GETS-IT" does the rest. No pain, no fussing, no changing shoes, no limping. It never fails. Try it tonight for any corn, callus, wart or bunion. Be sure that you get "GETS-IT," and nothing else.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Boston and recommended as the world's best corn cure by Riker & Jaynes Stores.

MAY "HUSH UP" THEFT AT WIRTH'S

Cafe Manager Stoltmann Still Missing; Effort to Make Restitution Expected.

The charge against Friedrich Stoltmann, the missing manager of Charles Wirth & Co.'s Keyes street cafe, of being short between $5,000 and $6,000 in his accounts, may not be pushed by Mr. Wirth on the understanding that efforts will be made by Stoltmann and his relatives to have Mr. Wirth reimbursed.

This development, which was reported late yesterday afternoon, was practically confirmed from two sources. A man who will over the telephone admit only that he was now at Wirth's admitting that the case will probably be settled quietly or "hushed up," as he expressed it.

E. H. Ruby, Mr. Wirth's attorney, said that Mr. Wirth desires to deal leniently with Stoltmann and hopes to get in touch with him the first of this week.

Two close relatives of Stoltmann, his brothers-in-law, said yesterday that they do not know where either Mr. or Mrs. Stoltmann are at present.

One brother-in-law is E. Gressetlin of No. 37 Wyman street, Jamaica Plain. Mrs. Gressetlin and Mrs. Stoltmann are sisters. The Stoltmanns lived with the Gressetlins for the past two years.

LEFT ON TUESDAY.

Mr. Ruby said:

"Mr. Stoltmann left here Tuesday. Mrs. Stoltmann left the next day. He told me before he left that he was going. I haven't the slightest idea where he is now. I don't know whether Mr. Stoltmann went to join him or not. I have no knowledge of Mr. Stoltmann's business affairs."

Miss Elsa Gressetlin, daughter of the family, added that she has no idea where her aunt and uncle are.

Otto Albrecht, the other brother-in-law of Stoltmann, a brother of Mrs. Stoltmann, lives at No. 29 Sheridan street, Jamaica Plain, not far from the Gressetlin home. Mr. Albrecht said:

"The first I knew of any trouble was what I read in the newspapers today. I have no idea where Mr. Stoltmann is."

Stoltmann is one of the best known German residents of the city. He is a member of the City Club and of several other clubs, including Boston Lodge of Schlaraffia, a fraternal and social organization.

Stoltmann had been with Mr. Wirth eight years on a salary of $50 a week. As a private banker he had made by his friend and I could not imagine him appreciating my money. I was told on Monday night and I discharged him immediately. Tuesday and Wednesday I wanted to settle the matter and I have not seen him since and know he has left Jamaica Plain.

"I have no idea how much has been taken. I have not had the books. The books have been audited but he said he had taken about $5,000 or $6,000. By which I suppose I am to infer that the bank I find has been taken out. I don't know how much I have lost that way."

CABOT PROTEST TO BE IGNORED

Medical Society Not Likely to Censure for Defence of Bernard Shaw Attack.

Dr. Walter L. Burrage, secretary of the Massachusetts Medical Society, declared yesterday that the society would probably ignore the protest of the Dorchester Medical Society against Dr. Richard C. Cabot for defending the attacks of George Bernard Shaw upon physicians.

The protest came up before the Medical Society in the shape of a resolution from the Dorchester society and was turned over to the committee on professional ethics.

"Nothing will probably be done with this resolution," said Dr. Burrage. "I think it is the general opinion of the members of the Massachusetts Medical Society that it will never come before us in a formal way. Every member of the society is entitled to his own opinion."

Dr. Cabot, in a magazine article, defended Shaw's criticisms, which are as follows:

1—Doctors perform unnecessary operations and manufacture and prolong lucrative illnesses.

2—Most doctors have no honor and no conscience.

4—Every doctor will allow a whole community to die rather than violate the professional etiquette of telling his colleagues he has blundered.

5—Doctors are hideously poor. The healthier the world becomes the more they are compelled to live by impostures.

6—The rank and file of the doctors are no more scientific than the tailors.

7—The medical profession is coming more than ever to represent desperate and embittered anti-science.

Dr. Cabot said: "While allowing for some of the vivid coloring given to Bernard Shaw's charges, I agree that they are substantially correct."

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear, so you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache, no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges, no raw throat, no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head, soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly. It's just fine for stuffy cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed up and miserable.—Advertisement.

To Cure Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness and head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected a complete cure after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear a watch tick tell how they have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear.

Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them, and you will have been the means of saving them years of misery perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength). Take home with you, pour into a bottle and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct the cause of catarrh, which in most cases is due to catarrhal germs in the middle ear. Parmint is effective, gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has ringing in the ears should give this recipe a trial and free themselves from this destructive disease.—Advertisement.

HEADACHE, COLD OR SOUR STOMACH, REGULATE YOUR BOWELS---10 CENTS

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous, constipated matter, gases and bile generated in the bowels, instead of being carried out of the system, is reabsorbed into the blood. When the poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, sickening headache. Cascarets will remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the bile and constipation poison move on and out of the bowels. One taken tonight straightens you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and make you feel bright and cheerful for months. Children need Cascarets, too.

Murray Seeks to Aid 'Farm-to-Table' Club

Postmaster Murray is seeking the aid of the State Board of Agriculture to encourage the formation of "Farm to Table" clubs; the object being to arrange for direct parcel post shipments from the country to your apartment or your front door of butter, eggs, produce and the like. When goods are shipped in fifty pound packages, a substantial saving in price is possible, according to the postmaster and during the Winter supplies have been coming 1,000 miles in good condition.

ADMITS 'DOUBLE CROSS ON TIMILTY'

"Sure," Says Brother-in-Law of Democratic Chairman at Tinkham-Horgan Hearing.

At the sixth day's hearing in the Roxbury Court before Justice Timothy J. Ahern and Representative Shirley P. Graves on the contest filed by former Senator Francis J. Horgan against the election to Congress of George Holden Tinkham in the Eleventh District, John H. Craven, who testified he was a brother-in-law of Senator James F. Timilty, chairman of the Boston Democratic Committee, was the principal witness.

He was asked: "Did you ever double-cross Senator Timilty?"

"Sure," Craven replied. "On Horgan. I told the gang to vote for Tinkham. I told everybody I knew. Horgan heard me."

He denied that he had ever drawn a dead man's salary from the city or that he had received $50 from Tinkham. He said he neither spent, received nor promised any money in connection with the election.

Thomas Condon, a Ward 13 voter, testified that he met Timilty on election day and Timilty "told him not to forget Tinkham."

Other witnesses included Arthur R. V. Hill, Dennis F. Riordan, Jacob L. Lopas, George A. Montague and Frank Paten. Some of them testified they heard before or after election that Timilty was "knifing" Horgan.

The commissioners were asked to secure caplases for M. J. McCarthy, W. J. Doian and Joseph A. Sullivan.

C. H. Levermore on Tour of the South

Professor Charles H. Levermore of Boston, head of the college and university department of the World Peace Foundation, is making a tour of Southern colleges seeking to secure for topics having to do with the peace movement a place in the college curriculums. Professor Levermore planned to visit Charlottesville, Lynchburg, Roanoke, Salem and Blackburg, Va., Knoxville, Tenn., Athens, Ga., Greenboro and Chapel Hill, N. C., and Marion, Ala.

HARVARD BOY, 15, A MENTAL MARVEL

Louis B. Keane, the fifteen-year-old Harvard Freshman who is still in knee breeches, the youngest Harvard man in the world, is the type of undergraduate that President Lowell welcomes to the university.

Young Keane belongs to the group whom the university president recently praised in a speech before the overseers. "The boy who gets down to hard work in the grammar and high schools and enters college young enough to graduate before his majority."

Keane expects to beat that by nearly two years.

In point of youthfulness he can claim the honors credited to the boy prodigy, William Sidis, son of Professor Sidis, and the mathematical marvel who astounded professors and friends alike with his knowledge of such abtruse subjects as the fourth dimension. Seven years ago Young Sidis was hailed as the fifteen-year-old Harvard wonder.

Young Keane is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Keane of No. 104 Cedar street, Roxbury. He stood among the honor men in the Harvard entrance examinations after having won renown as a student at the English High School. Previously he had been advanced by his grammar school teachers over two grammar grades. Trigonometry and calculus are his favorite studies. He refuses to be termed a mental wizard. At present the youthful freshman is the only person among the 4,799 Harvard men who wears short trousers. He is going to put on his first long trousers soon, however.

"Knicks" have been the result of several comic situations in the Harvard life of Keane. He was taken for an errand boy at the chemical laboratory where he has courses and was asked to go odd jobs.

When he applied for football tickets last Fall, the ticket man suspected him of being a messenger boy, and young Keane had to explain.

DOES NOT Come to Boston TOMORROW, But Is On His Way and Will Positively Appear at the Big Houghton & Dutton Store
MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15th
A Week From Tomorrow

Twice every year for lo! these many years the great LOCKHART—the only LOCKHART—the world-renowned LOCKHART—comes to Boston, takes possession of this store and conducts the year's greatest and most successful merchandising event—the LOCKHART "MILL-END" SALES.

Judging by the tremendous crowds—the enthusiasm—the ever-increasing volume of sales, these LOCKHART "MILL-END" SALES hold first place in the confidence of the New England public. Imitators follow along in the wake of every successful leader and other Mill Sales (?) are from time to time announced, but a wise and discerning public knows that there is but one LOCKHART—the ORIGINATOR of the GENUINE Mill-End Sales.

MR. LOCKHART will personally conduct the opening days of this notable event—one week from tomorrow morning, Monday, February 15. The LOCKHART SALES mean NEW GOODS AT MILL-END COST. That is what does it—there is no make-believe about LOCKHART—he originates, he does not imitate.

LOCKHART SALES ARE BASED ON NEITHER PATHOS NOR CHARITY.

FORE RIVER WORKMEN RUSH SUBMARINES FOR BRITISH

Checked by United States Neutrality, Send Men and Tools to Canada on Extra Pay to Win Big Bonus on $7,000,000 Contract; First Inside Facts of Contest Between "Big Business" and Nations.

This is a story of big business and war—the inside story, told in full for the first time, of Charles M. Schwab and the Twenty Submarines.

The "hero" is Charles M. Schwab—at a salary, it is said, of $250,000 a year.

The "villain" is the neutrality of the United States.

The "plot" hinges on a contract for the construction of twenty submarines for England, with a penalty of $150,000 a week for delay and a bonus of $250,000 a week for speed.

The contract for twenty submarines at $350,000 each thus involved, exclusive of bonuses and penalties, something like $7,000,000.

The first chapters of the story, Mr Schwab's barrel trip to England in October when he saw the [illegible] sunk, has already been told.

The second chapter, the conference with Secretary of State Bryan, his strenuous search for a means to fulfill his contract without violating American neutrality, and his second trip to England, have already been told.

HOW HE BEAT THE "VILLAIN."

But yesterday for the first time came to light the story of how Mr Schwab beat the "villain," how he arranged for the submarines to be built, and how the contract made with England is to be fulfilled.

The submarines are being built at the Canadian branch of the Vickers Company great English ship builders. The Canadian branch of the company has ships [illegible] miles from Montreal. To supply the great demand for skilled workers on submarines and for the necessary machinery, men and tools were taken from Fore River to Canada and put to work there, and now victory for Mr. Schwab is in sight.

A Fore River official yesterday said: "The Vickers Company is building submarines in Montreal. When they needed men, they of course came here where the skilled men could be hired, and they hired a lot of our men and took them up there.

"It is not true that they have bought any machinery or tools directly from us. But we are selling machinery and tools all the time—second hand material. Where this goes, we do not know."

EIGHT FOR THE U. S. NAVY.

"We are at present building eighteen submarines. Eight are for the United States Navy. Concerning the other ten, there is nothing to be said."

When Mr Schwab first got his contract he was asked to come to Washington and talk things over with Secretary of State Bryan. He went to this conference relying upon his plan to deliver the [illegible] not complete, but in parts. This he felt, would not violate [illegible] trality.

The State Department, however, urged the opposite view, that submarines delivered even in parts would mean a broken neutrality, and asked an assurance from Mr. Schwab that no submarines or parts would be built in this country.

Mr. Schwab left Washington—this was on December 2 and hurried to Montreal, where the great Vickers plant is built, was well equipped for the work he had in mind.

[illegible] the Vickers company, the first [illegible] machinists, riveters, electricians and steel plate makers with this [illegible] Are you willing to go to Canada to work if your expenses are paid and you receive a wage bonus?"

WORKMEN SENT TO CANADA.

At least 150 men agreed to go. They were told frankly, according to the men at the yards now, that they were to work on twenty submarines to be built to fulfill Mr. Schwab's contract. These men were sent on at once. Only last week steps were taken at Fore River to secure more men, some to fill places left vacant by machinists who are returning from Canada, but most of them to increase the working force at the Vickers yards. First class machinists and electricians are being recruited; and their departure will occur shortly. An official of the Vickers Company will meet them at the North station and they will take the 5 o'clock night train for Montreal.

One Fore River official put it yesterday that the men were "loaned" to the Vickers people. Certainly great numbers have gone and are going to work in Montreal.

Then the Vickers company faced the question of tools and machinery. At Fore River work had been slowed down on the ten submarines which had been begun for England, and so there were many "second hand" tools and machinery available. Arrangements were made for the indirect sale of these tools and machines. They were shipped over the New Haven road by way of the East Braintree branch and thence north to Montreal. These shipments are a matter of record on the freight offices.

Concerning the eight submarines being built at Fore River for the United States there is no secrecy. But questions about the other ten bring no answers or evasive answers. One man said: "They are being built for speculative purposes. You know we can always find a market for submarines."

Col. Alexander Declares He Is Innocent

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—Colonel [illegible] Alexander, who had [illegible] indictment here under the White Slave law and who had been arrested [illegible] located in Toronto last Wednesday, came to Chicago today.

Colonel Alexander was only four hours in Toronto after there had been a threat that if he continued missing long his bail would be forfeited. When he appeared in Chicago today he was taken before Judge Carpenter in Judge's [illegible] court Monday to answer the charges against him.

"I am innocent of this charge," he is [illegible] asked why bail was arranged. "The truth will come out in the trial. I have not been dodging the government searchers. I was in Toronto on business, and pressure of business prevented my earlier appearance here."

Manchester Plants Work Overtime

MANCHESTER, N. H. Feb. 6.—Industrial conditions here are taking a decided turn for the better. Nearly all of the principal industries are now humming. Much of the work being done is a direct result of the war in Europe, but large orders for goods for domestic consumption are being received. Among the industries running on full time or overtime are the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, W. H. McElwain Company, shoe manufacturers; The Stark Mills, khaki and duck makers, who are putting out a large war order for Summer uniforms; F. M. Hoyt Company, shoe manufacturers, the Corey Company, the S. A. Felton Company, R. G. Sullivan Company, Elliot Manufacturing Company and the Levonshire Mills.

Japanese Seize Norwegian Ship

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6.—The big Norwegian freighter Christian Ikora, Captain Mills, was seized today by Japanese warships, 200 miles off the Japanese coast, according to a wireless dispatch received here. The seizure was the result of alleged irregularities in the Ikora papers. The Christian Ikora sailed from Shanghai January 27 for San Francisco by the way of Japanese ports, with a capacity cargo of Oriental merchandise consigned to the Robert Dollar Company of this city.

TRAIN KILLS BANKER WILDE OF MELROSE

George L. Wilde, for twenty years assistant treasurer of the Melrose Savings Bank, and a man who had [illegible] Melrose folk was struck and instantly killed by an express train when he crossed the track at the Melrose Highlands depot late yesterday.

A number of people, including several intimate friends, were on the platform waiting for an inbound train and saw the accident.

Mr Wilde lived at No. 85 Richardson road, with his wife and two sons. [illegible] engineer. Mr Wilde came home from the bank at noon as usual on Saturday, spent the afternoon at home and [illegible] town to get the afternoon papers and magazines.

To reach the newsstand he had to cross the tracks at the depot. He did so, secured his papers, and started back. On the west platform at the depot he met several friends, and stopped to talk to them for a moment. Then he turned away and walked down the platform a little way before starting across.

At that moment, an outbound express whirled into sight. The spectators supposed Mr. Wilde had seen it and would step back. He moved forward instead; and a dozen people called to warn him.

But Mr. Wilde was extremely deaf, and did not hear. The next moment the train struck him.

Boston is Second for Healthy Babes

Records made public yesterday show that Boston ranks second among the cities of the United States as a health resort for babies. The baby death rate in New York was 94.6. In Boston it is 103.4. St. Louis is tied with Boston for second place, and Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago and Baltimore follow in order.

WIDOW OF RICH MAN A SUICIDE THROUGH GRIEF

Mrs. Edward W. Bourne Found Hanging in Cellar of Home at Nahant.

[illegible] Bourne, a wealthy Nahant resident and Boston business man died suddenly [illegible] known by their friends for their devotion to each other. They were sweethearts still at sixty. For two weeks now Mrs. Bourne has been breaking under her sorrow, and late yesterday afternoon she went into the cellar of her Nahant home and hanged herself.

Mr. and Mrs. Bourne had one daughter, Margaret. After Mr. Bourne's death Margaret took charge of her father's business, but she saw that her mother was dying of a broken heart. Then, in an effort to cheer her mother [illegible] Atlantic City.

But Mrs. Bourne, over and over, begged to return to Nahant. She could not be [illegible] the spot where Mr. Bourne had died. Last Thursday, Mrs. Bourne and her companion, Mrs. A. B. [illegible] returned to the Nahant house. Mrs. Bourne spent her time wandering about the grounds, revisiting the spots so crowded with memories of her long married life. Every path and tree and stone reminded her of some incident in their life together.

"I want to be with [illegible] and [illegible] Mrs. Bourne. "I want to be with him again." She was lost without him.

At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon Mrs. Bourne left Mrs. Johnson in the rooms upstairs in the Nahant house, and said: "I'm going down to walk back and forth on the plazza for a little while; and if you hear me moving about downstairs, don't be alarmed."

Mrs. Johnson thought no more of it. She heard Mrs. Bourne moving about below for a time; then all was still. After three-quarters of an hour she went down to look for Mrs. Bourne on the plazza.

But the lonely woman was nowhere to be found. Mrs. Johnson called to a [illegible] bar, and together they searched the grounds, and the house, and [illegible] about to telephone the police when they thought of the cellar. Side by side they went down the [illegible] stairs; and there they found her whom they sought.

Chief Lawton of the Nahant police sent for a pulmotor, and efforts were made to revive Mrs. Bourne, but they were fruitless. She had her wish, she was "with Edward, again."

Walsh Urges Peace Prayers on Lincoln Day

[illegible] his fellow-citizens the proper observance of the day. Governor Walsh [illegible] memory of Lincoln no more fittingly than by making Lincoln Day a day [illegible] peace.

The Legislature of Massachusetts, ten years ago, wisely set apart and designated as Lincoln Day the twelfth day of February, the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, whose name will be forever linked with that of Washington.

We owe to Abraham Lincoln more than to any other man the immeasurable blessings of a free and united nation.

Under his guidance the republic was saved from disruption and the country purified from the blight of slavery.

COLLEGE ASSOCIATION IN BIG PLAN TO BOOM SPORTS

Many Drastic Rule Changes Will Be Made at the Meeting in March.

By WALTER CAMP.
(Written expressly for the Boston American.)

Besides selecting the place for the games, many other extremely important points will come up at the annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America, which will be held on March 6, and when the proposal of the Executive and Advisory Committees as to certain changes in the rules governing the intercollegiate meeting will be taken up.

These changes, if carried out, will be a careful and conservative revision of the existing rules, rather than a radical departure from the present methods. It is hardly probable that any drastic changes will be made in the rules governing the meeting for the reason that the present rules have been in force for only one year, and the experience gained by the officials in charge of the meeting last year was not sufficient to warrant any radical changes.

Where the general principles of the present rules have proved satisfactory, however, there will be some changes made in the rules governing the meeting for the purpose of simplifying the conduct of the meeting and making it more interesting to the spectators. The most important of these changes will be in the rules governing the relay races. It is probable that the present rule, which provides that each man in the relay must run a quarter of a mile, will be changed so that the distance will be 440 yards instead of a quarter of a mile. This change will probably be made in order to conform with the rules governing the relay races in the Olympic games, which are to be held in this country in 1916, and which are governed by the International Olympic Committee.

DISCUSS FRESHMEN PROBLEM.

The instance specified, above, is the need of change of this kind [illegible] of Whitney of Dartmouth, who eventually won second place in the last intercollegiate games at Harvard, but [illegible] considerable [illegible] ing in the preliminaries. The same was true of [illegible] Columbia and Morrison of [illegible] were both shut out [illegible] while the event was won, with a distance that each of these had exceeded [illegible]

Another purpose of [illegible] the one rule [illegible] freshmen. This will not come up before the executive committee, but it may be debated at the meeting of the association if submitted [illegible] days before that meeting. A [illegible] many of the colleges do not have the one-year rule, and the question is [illegible] probability of the adoption of a rule, which prevails now at [illegible] the non-fifths of the colleges [illegible] University of Pittsburgh has adopted this rule and is enforcing it this year. While the rule has proved a success in colleges where it is applied, it probably will not be forced upon [illegible] intercollegiate.

Further revision of the rules in order to conform with those of the International Federation, will probably be adopted, notably the [illegible] where the track is measured twelve inches from the curb instead of eighteen, as has been the case for so many years. Another one is that giving the starter the privilege to recall the contestants. One very much needed one is the consideration [illegible]

Need Health? Try Bowling or Billiards

Bowling, a game that was in disrepute a few years ago because of its surroundings, now is hailed as the great cure-all of indoor sport.

"Bowlers never get appendicitis," now is recognized as one of our leading slogans. You see it on billboards, in street cars and in the newspapers.

Bowling is recommended to those fat persons who want to reduce and to their thin brethren who want to build up.

Billiards also is becoming fashionable as a health-giving game. Men no longer sneak into billiard or bowling halls. Mere playing of either game now is considered wholesome exercise instead of vice.

BOSTON RUNNER LOWERS COLORS OF GREAT FINN

Tom Halpin, the elongated B. A. A. captain, who probably ran his final race last night. Halpin may retire from athletics and enter the automobile business.

DOUBLE HARVARD VICTORY.

POLITZER LANDS DASH.

The honor of winning the first final of the evening fell to Politzer, the New York sprinter, who just nosed out Leonard O'Hara, the Tufts boy, of speeders. So close was the scrap for second that the judges dropped it a dead heat, and Starbuck pulled down the prize by virtue of a good start on the two Ten Hams came with a body push in the race.

Most of the stars remained out of the 600-yard event, Wilkie of Yale being the only scratch man to start. He easily qualified, finishing second in the third heat.

The Hunter mile, as usual, provided a dashing fine race, Mike Devaney of New York winning after displaying a splendid combination of head work and speed. He took the lead at the half-way mark and the pace he set quickly tore the hearts out of the rest of the field.

PACE TOO HOT FOR POWER.

Early in the running, Jimmy Power of the Unicorn outfit, looked like a possible winner, but Devaney's speed was too much. Giralamo, New York A. C. track man, managed to land up third, but Power held second the second medal Power half-a half a lap from the line Devaney finished in two fish on d had he been pushed might easily the mile a new record for the event. as it was, he time of 4 minutes 24 1 conds was only 3-5 of 1 second ack.

Seven long distance stars toed the mark in the three-mile special but after a mile had been covered by the pace set by Harvey Kohlemainen the Finnish champion proved too much for all but Harold Wessel, the New Zealand champion, A. D. Colby, and Glanakopoulos. A New York descendant of the inventors of the mile known marathon.

On the second mile, Colby attempted to pass the Finnish champion and as latter went down allowing Wessel to gain fully half a lap. Colby, worn out by his efforts, was forced to drop out.

The Boston star, however, had something left himself in the line of a finish and broke the worsted amid a pandemonium of yells. Glanakopoulis, lapped several times, took the medal for third, as the rest of the bunch had given up a hopeless pace.

After the B. A. A. athletes had earned the cross-country honors Dartmouth cracked in a double upset the relay races finally won by a scant margin.

O'Hara took the lead for Tech at the start and when Colleary, the anchor man, was passed over the finishing line in front of the Cambridge lads, and the Dartmouth boys had won by a couple of yards.

Syracuse, Tufts, Holy Cross and Crimson runners also figured in the 600-yard event, Wilkie of Yale being the only scratch man to start. He easily qualified, finishing second in the third heat.

MAJORITY OF PROPOSED BILLS WILL BE KILLED

Committee on Roads and Bridges Has Under Consideration No Less Than Twenty-One Bills That Affect the Motor Car Owner in More Ways Than One.

By J. C. KERRISON.

The manner in which the committee on roads and bridges took hold of the proposed legislation affecting automobiles and automobilists this year would indicate that it proposes to handle all matters in a thoroughly business-like manner and that in order to secure a favorable report a measure must possess considerable merit.

In its session of Tuesday this committee gave hearings on no less than twenty-one bills and it is assumed that not over three of them will receive a favorable report. Certain it is that many of the measures should have been given a second's consideration as they were decidedly of a number that might be termed "fool legislation" measures which if they were to be adopted by the legislature would never for a moment stand a close inspection of the final tribunal.

One of these was that providing that all motor owners should carry at least a $3,000 liability policy. Another bill was one which would prevent a motorist against whom a judgment in a suit for damages had been awarded and remained unpaid from operating an automobile. These two measures were evidently introduced for a purpose. One, it is understood, was introduced by an insurance agent and the other by a lawyer. The fact that both of these two measures which will undoubtedly be given leave to withdraw.

The one great problem that seemed to confront the committee was that of dimming headlights on motor vehicles. No less than five of the measures proposed covered this problem. And just what the outcome will be, at this present time, a matter of conjecture. There is no doubt but what the headlights will be taken to governing the use of headlights by motor vehicles, but it might not be a surprising thing if it incorporate in the law a clause that will be effective and workable, requiring electric cars to dim their headlights of electric cars as well as the glaring headlights of motor vehicles, are also a source of danger, and the time is coming when they will be subject to the same restrictions in the matter of dimming as are the gasoline cars. It is very easy for the motorman to cut off the power and run a limited car without danger on a well-defined railway with other lights, can readily do so with the central headlight; on the highway, however, a somewhat more dangerous proposition for the operator of a motor vehicle to extinguish his headlights and to continue to drive over a comparatively rough road without any illumination from light to darkness is decidedly confusing to the man behind the wheel.

Just how this special thing is to be enforced is not at the present time apparent, and so far as is known there has not yet been devised any proper dimmer that can be successfully attached to the thousands of motor cars now in use. To pass legislation which prohibits the attachment of any particular device would be manifestly unfair to the many thousands of people who now have invested large expenses which for persons not versed in the art would be necessary, so that it is questionable if the committee would recommend any bill providing for the installation of certain attachments for doing away with the glare of headlights.

The desired end can possibly be reached by requiring that the headlights shall be abolished in the congested districts of cities, or a rule might be made for municipalities of a size by providing that the upper part of the headlight lens shall be painted with some color that will intercept part of the light, according to experiments in various cities, has proved a decided success in the matter of reducing headlight glaring.

There is no doubt but what the glare of the powerful headlight is a nuisance, but it is a question at the present time if it is safe to abolish it. A nuisance is perhaps much better than a fatality and if it is summarily abolished there is no question, in the minds of many who have studied the problem, but what the fatalities would be manifestly increased.

The Massachusetts Highway Commission, through its chairman, is not ready to recommend the abolishment of these lights. They believe that some headlights are dangerous, but they are appreciative that many accidents result from the absence of this same. The commission has as yet devised no regulations covering the situation, and it is a question in the minds of the commission if the abolishment of headlights would not create more dangerous results than does their toleration.

The impression prevails that the committee on Roads and Bridges will suggest that the matter be left in the hands of the highway commission which shall investigate the various angles and decide upon some measure which will later be presented for legislative consideration.

Several measures affecting the speed law came up for consideration, one of which was to raise the speed limit from twenty to thirty miles an hour. The proponents of the measure evidences offered were to the effect that the present law is unjust, as the speed of motor vehicles of the present day is such that it is most satisfactory and has been proven, after several years of trial, of value to those who use them and those who walk.

In other words, there is really no occasion to increase the speed limit. The present law, if properly interpreted, is about as satisfactory a one as can be devised and what is said as regards speed can be applied virtually to all angles of motor legislation. The statute books are today amply burdened with automobile legislation and with the laws now on the books there should be less occasion for the presentation of so many proposed measures each legislative year.

It would seem, according to those who are said to be in a position to know, that very few of the proposed measures will receive the favorable recommendation of the roads and bridges committee this year.

Readjust List Prices on Tires

"We believe that the new price list on Fisk tires," says F. C. Ayres, Boston manager of the Fisk Rubber Company, "is undoubtedly the best basis possible, assuming that dealers are more interested in the cost of a tire than in discounts usually quoted from a high list which shows 'paper' rather than the real price.

"There has been considerable reduction in the price of both casing and tubes, made possible by the low-ering of the price of rubber, resulting from increase supplied from the Far East assured since the raising of the embargo and by our tremendously increased production.

"There has been an entire readjustment of prices. The profit provided is fair and at least equal to what the majority of dealers have made in the past. It should now be possible for everyone to maintain prices and be on doing a fair business. The evils of trade evils, "price cutting," and the individual will be buying tires on their merits and not on so-called 'list rates.'"

Striking Body Design Shown

One of the most distinguished features of the cars that are being exhibited this year is the marked beauty of body lines. Aside from the striking color schemes, the visitor will mark a new epoch in American automobile design.

One of the principal exponents of this feature noted at the various automobila shows throughout the country and which can also be seen in the salesrooms of its dealers is the new Paige six-sprinter car, manufactured by the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company. This new six has made quite a stir, not only because of the value offered at the price, but because of its artistic, symmetrical beauty as well, and it is proving to be by far the most popular model the Paige company has ever turned out. Certainly the Paige people have never before received so many compliments on the general appearance of their cars.

IRON CROSS FOR BRAVERY.

Adolph Waltz, a motorcyclist of Saginaw, Mich., was recently decorated with the Iron Cross for bravery in the German army. Waltz's duties as a motorcycle scout were to carry messages between the various corps and headquarters. He, belonging to the generals' headquarters, Waltz's machine was shot from under him. He rolled into a ditch and was left for dead. After recovering from the shock, however, he crawled along the ditch until out of danger and then ran to headquarters and delivered the message. His bravery permitted reinforcements to be sent in time to save the German position from annihilation.

Study Convict Labor Question

Road work for misdemeanant prisoners is the subject of an investigation which is being conducted under the joint direction of the national committee on prisons and prison labor and the graduate highway engineering department of Columbia University. Leland Stanford, B. S. '[illegible], who is in charge of the investigation, has had considerable experience in road camps of Georgia, where a majority of the able-bodied prisoners are worked on the roads.

The study will consider all such matters as the most economical size of a road gang, the cost of guarding, supervising and housing it, and the approximate value of a day's work. It will also [illegible] possibility of increasing efficiency by means of the payment of wages, the creation of "after work hours," and the shortening of sentence for good conduct. Conditions in the different parts of the country will be studied with especial [illegible] as to the effect of weather conditions and the [illegible].

Already much valuable information has been gathered, and by the time the study is completed information will be at the disposal of all those undertaking convict road work, which will enable them to conduct their camps with [illegible] and [illegible] prisoners in this way to lessen the cost of the county jail and to benefit both the prisoners and the county through the impetus which will be given to the building of good roads.

That Snare and Delusion — —the PADDED PRICE-LIST

OF course "this is a free Country!"

Of course every one of the 57 (or more) Tire Manufacturers may sell his Product in any old way that seems best to him

Of course the 30,000 Dealers, Garages, and Repair Shops that Retail Tires, to Consumers, have a legal right to charge as much as they can get, and get as much profit as the Padded Price List System tempts them to haggle for!

But, how much Profit are they actually averaging, through such Tactics?

If they kept an accurate record of each individual Sale,—of what each particular Tire cost them, of what Profit its "fancy" List-Price seemed to promise them,—and then what profit they actually made after they had cut that "Fancy" Price to meet the Competition it had raised up—

—What then?

They would find that the Padded Price-List was a Delusion and a Snare, to Retailers as well as Consumers.

They would find their AVERAGE profits (as a result of it) to be far below the normal and reasonable profit they are entitled to.

They would find that, in order to get as near to the "Fancy" Price-List as possible, it had cost them twice as much for time to sell goods, as it need cost under the standard "One Priced" method of Good Business.

If they put on their Thinking Caps they would realize that the Padded Price-List is fast putting the Tire Retailer on the Road to Yesterday,—and tempting all kinds of Competition into the field through the huge profits it seems to offer—

—Inspiring Price-Cutting "Specialists" everywhere, to "get into the game" and, by cutting that portion of the unreasonably large profits provided for by the Padded Price-List, to SEEM to undersell the regular Dealer.

Where does this sort of thing lead to for thoughtless TIRE RETAILERS?

Have they no regard for TO-MORROW'S Market?

AND You—Mr. Tire User!

How long will you continue to "stand for" the imposition which the Padded Price-List represents?

How soon will you realize that such Padded Price-Lists are deliberately printed UP for the purpose of misleading YOU on Values, causing you to pay as high a price as you can be talked into?

Compare notes with a dozen of your Friends who buy the same size and brand of Tire as you do

You will find that, notwithstanding the Printed Price List you and your Friends have each paid probably a different price for the self-same Tire.

Why does this condition exist, in an Industry so substantial as the Tire and Auto-Accessory Trade?

Because, the Auto-Accessory Dealer's is considered a LUXURY Business

Because, there has been no standard to measure Values by

Because,—it is a habit of Tire Dealers to use Price-Lists as a Basis for making DISCOUNTS OFF, instead of as a basis of True Value, of bona-fide price.

Because, YOU have taken too much for granted.

Because, YOU have permitted a System to manipulate prices on you in a way that you would not tolerate on any other kind of Merchandise

Here is an illustration of how that Little Game works out.

ON the date when this is written (Jan. 1st, 1915) there lie before us the printed Price-Lists to Consumers, with Wholesale prices actually quoted to Dealers,—of 15 leading Tire Manufacturers

On 34 x 4 Plain-Tread Tires the Manufacturers' printed "List Prices" range from $24.35, UP to more than $32.00 each None are listed to Consumers below the Good rich price, which at that date was $24.35 and now is $19 40).

But, though none are listed at less to Consumers, the net WHOLESALE prices to Retailers, ranged 30% to 55%. Retail Profit over cost (more than $11.00 per Tire Profit on less than a $20.00 Cost), with 13 different intermediate dimensions of profit between these two figures.

All these for 34 x 4 Plain-Tread Pneumatic Tires

Thoughtless Retailers are therefore sorely tempted to "push the sale" of Tires that carry a seeming (Price List) profit of 30% to 55%, instead of the Normal and moderate Profit on GOODRICH Tires.

Get the significance of that to you,—Mr. Auto-Owner!

And, realize what an entirely "Square" Dealer he must be who frankly advises you to buy GOODRICH Tires (for the greater Mileage per-amount-YOU invest in them) when that vast differential in POSSIBLE (Padded) Price-List Profit stares him in the face

Realize too, that the Dealer who offers you Tires, the Padded Price Lists of which carry him, say $6.00 to $11.00 Retail Profit, can mighty well afford to take "a heavy discount off" the List Price on such Tires, without at all suffering for profit on the Margin still left, on probably a very ordinary Tire

If he takes $2.00 off an Eight-dollar Profit, or $5.00 off an Eleven-dollar Profit, he is still getting $6.00 profit, instead of the Normal and Moderate profit he would have made if he sold you a GOODRICH Tire instead at its actual List-Price, and Makers' bona-fide Valuation.

BEAR the foregoing in mind when you are next offered a so-called "Liberal Discount" off PADDED Price-Lists, that are printed UP for that very purpose

And don't forget that when you are offered, maybe $1.00 to $5.00 off a Padded Price-List that some other Tire User (who has more Time and Disposition to Haggle) may get $3.00 to $7.00 off same Tire under that System

That is one reason why it is such a fatally bad System for the Retailer as well as the Consumer

It promises Profits EXCESSIVE that practically every Dealer is willing to Cut them, in order to make a Sale.

Then when, under this System, the shrewd Consumer Shops Around half a day to see which Dealer will give him the most Discount off the Tire he wants it frequently results in his being switched to an inferior Tire, as heavily discounted, in order to make a Sale, that the Dealer averages much less than a NORMAL and reasonable profit on his year's output

Short Mileage (in Road Work) then gives the Unthinkable Answer to the Consumer, who [illegible] with the Dealer, gets an Adjustment and another make of Tire

THE Materials and Workmanship that cause a Tire to deliver Mileage, at the right price per 1000, COST money. And "Big Discounts" off Padded Price Lists are a poor substitute for proper Mileage and satisfactory Result-Production, to either Tire User, or Tire Retailer

Goodrich Tires can, and do, give the Greatest Mileage,—for Amount they Cost YOU,—because the Materials and Workmanship that produce maximum Mileage can be put into them, when only a FAIR Profit for both Manufacturer and Retailer is figured into the Makers price to Consumers.

The Retailer who recommends GOODRICH Tires to you is far-seeing enough to know this,—and to know that a continuous Patronage can only be built upon such a Safe, Fair and Square foundation

He conserves your Interests while building his own permanent Market, wherein he avoids the temptations and dangers of "Padded Price Lists," and frankly offers you FAIR PROFIT Goodrich Tires instead.

Trust that kind of Dealer to sell you other Auto Accessories on a similarly fair basis

Compare these Goodrich "Fair-List" prices, showing tremendous reductions with prices you have previously paid. For instance, old price on Goodrich 34 x 4, Smooth Tread, $24.35. Present "Fair-List" price, $19.40. Ask your dealer for Users' Net Price List, showing prices on all sizes.

Ford

The all kinds of weather car for every day in the year. Snug and tight and cozy when the top is up—a smart, stylish roadster when the top is folded (and it only takes a minute or two to raise or lower the top). The Ford Coupelet is by all odds a most practical two-passenger car with luxury built into durability.

All the speed and power and usefulness of the gas car with the convenience and exclusiveness of an electric—and Ford economy of operation and upkeep, less than 2 cents a mile.

Ford Coupelet $550. Sedan $975; Town Car $690; Touring Car $490; Runabout $440. All fully equipped, f. o. b. Detroit. On display and sale at 567 Boylston Street, Boston, and Charles River Road, Cambridge.

Buyers will share in profits if we sell at retail 800,000 new Ford cars between August 1914 and August 1915.

DESCRIPTION OF MISSING STANDARD OIL SALESMAN

Henry Clark Coe, Jr.
Missing since Saturday, January 30, 1913.

Twenty-three years old, five feet eight inches tall, medium complexion, weighs 150 pounds, large scar around thumb on left hand, has rather prominent nose, auburn hair.

"Telled & Co." name on coat.

Very active, hazel eyes.

Several teeth have gold filling.

Tailor 144.

[illegible] who [illegible] he was going to see friend over Zeigler street with Mrs. [illegible] a puzzling circumstance, for she had no friends there or in the neighborhood.

There was absolutely no friction between my son and his wife. They were a devoted couple, he was a genial, happy fellow and there was nothing like a quarrel or an argument between them.

"DISAPPEARED MARVELOUS."

I think I know Coe. He, or somebody like him, went over Zeigler street [illegible] a saturday. I saw [illegible] car and will testify to [illegible] appearance.

Mrs. Gertrude Kelly of No. 1 [illegible] street, Roxbury, has read it of Tuesday evening, January 28, [illegible] called at the store where Mrs. Kelly was in Warren street, Roxbury, and inquired the directions to Zeigler street. Mrs. Kelly thought [illegible] she understand that Coe had passed through Zeigler street often on his trips to Roxbury plumbing shops to make sales of standard oil goods.

Mrs. Kelly says Coe then spoke to her as follows:

"Do you know I had a funny experience [illegible] got I had a wife and then suddenly thought of an appointment I made with her this evening. I promised to meet her in a house on Zeigler street."

This struck Mrs. Kelly as still more unjustifiable. Mrs. Coe is in no physical condition to make a trip so far from her Commonwealth avenue flat except under grave emergency and there is no adequate reason advanced for Mr. and Mrs. Coe going to Zeigler street at all.

CAREFUL CANVASS MADE.

In view of these Zeigler street reports the careful canvass was made yesterday, with wholly negative results.

The information yesterday which extends the known time of Coe's movements for an hour after he left home that Saturday morning was telephoned to the AMERICAN last night by Abraham Takelwitz of the Hub-ub Hardware Company of No. 1964 Washington street, Roxbury. He said:

"I was called on me at the store last Saturday morning. I bought me goods from him because I had bought from him before. He seemed in good spirits. My wife recalls that he did not have his grip with him that day. I never caught of him again until I read the stories of his disappearance. He is a fine fellow."

The grip to which Takelwitz referred is Coe's grip case. This was previously identified by the AMERICAN at the plumbing shop of Schwehr & Company, No. 118 Northampton street, South End. Coe left it there on Friday afternoon, January 24, the day before he disappeared.

A young woman bookkeeper at the Schwehr store says Coe came in hurriedly, left the sample case and said:

"Excuse me, I would like to leave my case here. I will call for it. I must get home in time to have supper, dress and go to a house on Zeigler street with my wife."

The bookkeeper is positive Coe said Zeigler street. Employees at other inexplicit statements attributed to Coe, of [illegible] going to take Mrs. Coe to the Zeigler street neighborhood.

Under instruction of a representative from Coe's office Schwehr still holds the sample case waiting for Coe to come for it.

Coe's father Dr. Henry Clarke Coe of New York made the following statement yesterday:

"We have received a great many letters and messages from Boston about my son but we put little hope in no weight in most of them. The fact that he was seen in Lawrence has been thoroughly investigated but has for nothing helpful has been brought to light.

BRAIN HEAVILY TAXED.

We think it highly possible that my son may be wandering about somewhere. His brain had been heavily taxed lately, he was so wrapped up in his business. He was overworked, and something like a [illegible] is possible.

The theory that he is held for ransom does not appeal to me as [illegible]

I have communicated with the Standard Oil office in New York, making sure I [illegible] in touch with [illegible] there but they have heard nothing.

Dorchester Realty Men Urge Passage of Tunnel Measure

Dorchester led its first volley in the campaign to get legislation providing for a tunnel extending from Andrews Square into the heart of the district.

Prominent Dorchester business men representing a number of organizations appeared before the committee on Metropolitan Affairs and pointed out the urgent need of a tunnel to relieve congestion at the Dudley street terminal and to afford rapid transit to that section of the city.

The hearing was on Senate Bill No. 158, introduced by the United Improvement Association, and providing for a subway from Andrews square to Codman square.

Every speaker emphasized the fact that Dorchester needs a tunnel and waived discussion of the route to be selected. It is expected to be announced [illegible] the hearing on the bill [illegible] before the committee [illegible] should their wish [illegible] responsible for the location [illegible] route, leaving it to the committee to decide this question. Three routes have been proposed—one from Andrews square [illegible] Mattapan square by way of Grove Hall, and the second straight out Dorchester avenue from Andrews square to Mattapan square by way of Grove Hall. The third straight out Dorchester avenue from Andrews square to Codman square.

Among the speakers for a Dorchester tunnel were Mayor J. Paul Jones, representing the United Improvement Association, Matthew [illegible] Improvement Association.

Sell City Realty at Public Auction

Several important real estate transactions are scheduled to take place during the next two weeks. These include property in Boston proper, East Boston and the North End. Included in the sales are several pieces of municipal property which will be auctioned off by Municipal Auctioneer Edward W. Foye.

On next Wednesday, the 10th, Mr. Foye will sell at auction, at 3 p. m., real estate on Nos. 40 to 46 Long wood avenue, near Roxbury Crossing, which will be offered for sale by Auctioneer Macdonald. The property consists of a frame three-story building containing [illegible] square feet of land. It is [illegible] accommodate [illegible] families.

At 4 p. m. the estate at No. 40 Long wood avenue, near Roxbury Crossing, will be offered for sale by Auctioneer Macdonald. The property consists of a frame three-story building containing [illegible] square feet of land. It is [illegible] accommodate [illegible] families.

On Tuesday, February 16, at 12 noon, the valuable parcel of land with the [illegible] at No. 114 Sales [illegible] Jerusalem place, North End.

On Wednesday, February 17, at 3 p. m., Mr. Foye will offer for sale the parcel of land with the [illegible] formerly used as Police Station No. 7, at the corner of Meridian and [illegible] East Boston. There are about [illegible] square feet of land. A deposit of $500 will be required at the time of both sales.

Buy Brookline Lots; Plan Two Dwellings

Final papers have gone to record of the sale of two lots of land containing 14,000 square feet in the [illegible] section of Brookline to Harry Coleman. The land has a frontage of 140 feet on Elba street. It is the intention of Coleman to erect a stucco house and garage for his own occupancy. In connection with the above transaction, Mr. Coleman has sold to Bernard Gilbert one lot of land containing 7,000 feet. The latter will erect a house for his occupancy. George W. Johnston was the broker in these transactions.

DORCHESTER BROKER MOVES

L. W. Vinal, a well-known Dorchester real estate broker, has moved to more commodious quarters in the Franklin Park Theatre Building at No. 620 Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester, almost adjacent to his former office.

HOW MUCH DO YOU KNOW OF DEEDS?

Many Readers Puzzled About Different Kinds of Deeds Apply to Realty Information Bureau.

Address all questions to the Real Estate Information Bureau, Boston AMERICAN. Questions should be plainly written on only one side of the paper. Full name and address of the inquirer must appear or the questions will be disregarded. Place on the inquiry a letter and a number under which look for a reply. While using every endeavor to be accurate, the AMERICAN does not guarantee nor will it be held responsible for the accuracy of its replies. Where realty outside the State is involved, answers may be subject to delay of one or two weeks.

G250—It would be possible, but inadvisable, for a person holding a quitclaim deed to a piece of property to give a warrant deed. Even though the title has been examined there is always the possibility that a flaw has been overlooked. In that event the grantor, if he gave a warranty deed would be obliged to sustain the loss. He would be unable to hold to account the person from whom he purchased the property, because that person delivered only a quitclaim deed which means that he has simply transferred whatever rights he had in the property.

The best course for you to take would be to give a special warranty deed. This kind of a title holds you responsible only for a defect which has resulted during the time that the title was in your possession. You would not be responsible for a flaw prior to the time you purchased the property.

M26—Whether you are held strictly to the agreement or not depends on another party. Supposing you failed to keep the agreement because of [illegible] effort. In such a case [illegible] may be. On the other hand, [illegible] as in the first instance, again overlook the cessation of payments [illegible] allow you to continue payments instead of forfeiting the rights acquired in the property by previous payments.

W834—The land to which you refer is well situated and the [illegible] increase in value. The [illegible] is developing the property and [illegible] in the full balance for [illegible] of taxes and is considered [illegible] Water mains are being laid through the property at the present time.

H25—If the eaves of your house [illegible] over the adjoining lot you [illegible] are entirely within it, [illegible] is in ordering you to remove them. In case you refuse, the [illegible] secure a writ from the courts ordering you to do so. They have no [illegible] right up to the lot line, but [illegible] there is no restriction on the property prohibiting such an [illegible] since the house is over fifty years old it is doubtful if such restriction [illegible] exists. If it ever existed it has probably long since expired.

1 The property to which you refer is in a fair locality. It is low [illegible] and would be suitable for low-priced homes.

It is doubtful if electric cars will run through this locality for a number of years, although there was some talk a few months ago of extending the car line.

2 The concern which is developing the property has been in the business for a long term of years and is regarded as reputable.

3 If your lot is advantageously located [illegible] a number of [illegible] for houses on the street referred to.

Answer to question will be made in a subsequent issue. Investigation is now under way.

H8530—You have a perfect right to sell the land, subject to the mortgage held by the bank. The purchaser, however, would be obliged to continue the payments on the mortgage until it is liquidated.

Purchase Apartment House in Brookline

William E. McCoy & Co. have sold for Charles E. Osgood the three-story brick apartment houses located at Nos. 13 to 19 Park drive, Brookline. The entire property is assessed at $48,900, of which $8,000 is on the 9,274 square feet of land. The Ross Company bought for investment.

The Dance Songs of Dorothy Darling

DAINTY Dorothy Darling is a maid of high degree,
Who mingles mirth with melody wherever she may be.
The secret of the spell she casts is Dottie's tuneful fancies
For Dottie simply has to sing whenever Dottie dances
And every voice joins in with hers while everybody's dancing,
And shortly even grandpapa upon the floor is prancing
The proof? Well, here's the first a Dorothy Darling sample:

Would Anybody Think—

That This Sweet-Faced Little American Actress, Because She Had Some Kind Things to Say About the Germans, Would Be Forced Out of Her Part in a London Theatre and Have to Apologize to the British Public?

But That's Just What Happened to Miss Fern Rogers

MISS FERN ROGERS, the American actress, playing the leading role at the Drury Lane Theatre in London was unceremoniously thrown out of the cast because of certain things she had said about the Germans.

A round robin signed by nearly all the principals in the pantomime, "The Sleeping Beauty," was delivered to Mr. Arthur Collins, the manager, saying that Miss Rogers had expressed such pro-German sentiments that they could not stand her presence in the company.

Life has been made so unpleasant for her that Miss Rogers has made this interesting public apology.

The important feature was a "union" garment of warm, white, fleecy wool covering the invalid from wrists and neck to ankles. Over this, when needed, was a woolen jacket. Why a Banker's Daughter Who Marries a C

Some Notable Instances of Mis-Mated Marriages

THE list of mesalliances b[illegible] of great names and fortunes is a [illegible] men of wealth or intell[illegible] who have married women wi[illegible] for social or mental companionship [illegible] once the first heiress went for a morning [illegible] with the first groom employed by her wea[illegible] father, there have been occasional erratic mat[illegible] but a few of these are especially striking exam[illegible] because of the wide contrast between the position of the bride and that of her lowly spouse.

From most among these instances of mismated couples is the case of Victoria Morosini, who married her father's coachman, and of her sister, Giulia Morosini, who took for a husband a policeman of Juliet Breitunx, who became the wife of a neighbor's gardener, and of Elizabeth C. Coppell, who eloped recently with her chauffeur.

These matrimonial indiscretions may not be solely laid at the door of youth for the ages of these brides who willingly made the social descent, vary between one matrimonial extreme to the other.

Victoria Morosini was eighteen when she ran away with Ernest Schilling, her father's coachman. But Giulia Morosini, her sister, beside having the unhappy example of her sister's ill-starred marriage as an deterrent was entitled to the wisdom that should accompany an age approaching fifty. Juliet Breitunx, who sought wedded happiness with her father's gardener, was more or less irresponsible nineteen, but Elizabeth Coppell, who ran away with her middle aged chauffeur, was fifty-nine.

Victoria Morosini's runaway match with her father's groom and coachman astonished two continents. New York rang with it, for her father was a banker of large wealth. His name was linked with some of the most brilliant names in finance. By an act of great personal courage he had saved the life of Jay Gould. As a reward for this act the founder of the house and fortunes of the Goulds laid for his rescuer the foundation of a great fortune.

Moreover, the name of Morosini was not only associated with finance. It stood for much in the world of art. Giovanni P. Morosini built at Riverdale, N. Y., one of the most magnificent homes of the splendid array along the banks of the Hudson River, and this mansion became practically a museum of objects of art.

His art collection was one of the largest, best chosen and most valuable in the world. There was in the great house Elmhurst, an armory filled with priceless war trophies, the most costly assemblage of weapons and martial relics owned by any individual collector. His national love for graceful form and vivid color manifested itself in every room in the house. The rugs represented a magnificence that was almost royal.

Nor was Giovanni Morosini renowned alone as a banker and art collector. Enveloping his name was the cloak of romance. He had come from his native [illegible] with one in the train of the loyal followers of Garibaldi. His zeal for his patriot chief he showed by risking his low fortunes even when they led to [illegible] at Clifton on Staten Island. Fame and [illegible] fortune surrounded the name of Morosini. Yet [illegible] these standards filling her romantic [illegible] Victoria Morosini allowed them to be reposed in that of the good-looking young groom in her father's stables. The youthful pair rode often [illegible] roads together. Victoria paid visits to the [illegible] and dogs in the stalls.

[illegible] the girl was missing. Likewise the [illegible] agent at the station at Riverdale, N. Y., recalled that they had taken the train together for New York. Inquiries revealed that they had been married and had at once gone to the East Side home of the groom bridegroom's mother.

Schilling became a street car conductor, earning the usual stipend of two dollars a day. Very loyally the heiress of millions tried to adopt her bridegroom's accustomed scale of living. From the first it was difficult. After a few months it became unendurable. She went upon the stage. For a short time she was seen in the chorus of the Casino in New York.

The salary she earned softened the hardships of the bare little home her husband was able to give her. But in some mysterious way this buffer between the petted and luxurious heiress, and what to her was sternest privation, was removed. Pressure of unseen but powerful influence was brought to bear upon the management, and she lost her position on the stage. She had to dismiss the little maid whose wages her salary had paid. She had even to scrub and wash and cook and become her own manicure. It was hard, and her conductor husband, coming home gruff and tired at night, often found the former heiress in tears.

There was no hope of reconciliation with her father. Giovanni Morosini had turned her from his door and had forbidden any member of her family to speak to or aid her on pain of disinheritance. No matters stood when one morning the bride walked with her husband to the corner where he was to take charge of his car.

"She kissed me good-bye. I saw nothing different about her. That night when I came home she was gone. I have not seen her since. There was never any trouble between us except about money. She didn't know how to spend my wages. May be I could not expect her to, raised as she was."

That was the explanation her husband gave many years afterward. Victoria Morosini Schilling had dropped out of sight as completely as though she had flung herself into the river and had been carried out to sea and lost in the shifting undertow. Years after ward it was discovered that she had gone to a convent in New England. She had gone there at her father's stern bidding, to expiate her folly. She has since been found, a white-haired woman, living obscurely in a boarding house at Ro[illegible]

Her father's enmity lasted to the en[illegible] a white haired, broken woman pa[illegible] Pittsville home; a very short visi[illegible] trains. She talked with relatives, b[illegible] mitted to see her father. "It is by [illegible] said.

Although the spectacle of her siste[illegible] its lifelong consequences might have [illegible] ther, Giulia Morosini married Arthur [illegible] York policeman, whom she and her [illegible] while driving on the Speedway, which [illegible] officer's beat.

For a year the match, despite the [illegible] positions of husband and wife, seeme[illegible] one. Soon, however, there were ru[illegible] scenes at Elmhurst. Werner, in ord[illegible] heiress, had been under the necessity [illegible] a present incumbent in wifehood. Th[illegible] her went to Reno, and, after due rea[illegible] secured a divorce.

But the big policeman had negle[illegible] weighted with the wisdom of ages, to[illegible] old love before marrying the new. [illegible] interest in the former Mrs. Werner, [illegible] was evinced in secret visits to her. [illegible] lent scenes at Elmhurst.

She who had been Giulia Morosini [illegible] around the historic home, ordering [illegible] to forbidden to enter it. She brought [illegible] ment of her marriage. Thus the public [illegible] came aware of the wreck of a marriage [illegible] a mesalliance.

The marriage of Juliet Breitung, daug[illegible] New York banker, Edward N. Breitung, to [illegible] a gardener employed on the estate adjoini[illegible] ung Summer home, was a social bomb. [illegible] suspense, denials, proofs.

Juliet Breitung had gone from a fai[illegible] straight to her parents' Summer home [illegible] Mich. There, while on long walks, she [illegible] admire the grounds of their neighbor [illegible] Kleist, the gardener, noting her admir[illegible] her guide about the estate of his em[illegible] Farrell. The moon, the lake, the pro[illegible] racy of the West—whatever the ch[illegible] cause, the girl and the gardener became [illegible] each other. So much so, that when the [illegible] ily started East in the Autumn, the [illegible]

By Prof. George Trumbull Ladd

Emeritus Professor of Philosophy at Yale University.

THE word mesalliance is the French for a marriage between persons of somewhat widely separated social positions. Such marriages, for example, are those between the daughter of a rich banker and her father's coachman, or a refined spinster with a coarse young adventurer; or when a prosperous and educated professional man takes for his wife his ignorant cook or housemaid.

A measure of opprobium attaches to the very [illegible] ning of the word; predictions of disaster are quite regularly made as to the outcome of all such marriages. And, in fact, these predictions are ordinarily, in considerable measure, realized.

Now, while marked differences in age, or education, or tastes, or habits of luxurious living and other accompaniments of social position, are usually unfavorable to the completer success of the matrimonial venture, they are by no means necessarily so. The growth of democratic ideas and ideals, and the freer mixing of the classes hitherto kept apart by social distinctions, all over the world and especially in this country at the present time, are pretty certain to increase the number of so-called mesalliances. It is worth while, then, to ask ourselves the question: Are such marriages destined beforehand to be unhappy; and if so, for what reasons?

Now, we are not proposing to write a homily with the plagiarized title, "How to Be Happy Though Married"; much less, a sermon of warning on the dangers in general which haunt those who, in whatever social circles, make undue haste to get married. But the question as to the chances of any particular so-called mesalliance turning out well or ill undoubtedly resolves itself into the larger problem.

What in general are the real causes that determine, irrespective of changes occurring after the marriage has been contracted, the good or the ill fortune of the married pair? Thus the question of the mesalliance, in particular, resolves itself into the problem of matrimonial misfits in general.

There are undoubtedly several physiological peculiarities which tend powerfully either to the direction of strong and permanent feelings of attraction between the sexes, or else in the direction of sudden or slowly developing feelings of repulsion. The causes of these feelings are not usually analyzed by those who experience them; and, indeed, they are not usually analyzable even if they could be placed in expert hands. They are by nature customarily complicated and obscure—too much so to be capable of either precise statement or scientific explanation. They do not by any means always deserve to determine the ultimate decision.

But where they are violent in either direction, they always afford good ground for a pause and for careful inquiry and for great discretion. This is particularly true if they are strong, not to say violent feelings of physical attraction. For when these motives for the marriage alliance lessen or fade quite completely away, if there are no other sustaining forces of an economic, social, moral or religious character, the marriage is sure to be unhappy if not unbearably miserable. While, then, these physiological causes and the feelings they produce are not—as we have already said—necessarily decisive, they are not to be disregarded. And when they are persistent and not offset by other considerations, they have not a little to say as to whether any particular marriage shall be happy or unhappy.

Closely allied with these physiological causes, and indeed a part of the same thing, are the differences in temperament between the two persons entering into the relation of marriage. The popular use of the word temperament is very loose; and the scientific doctrine of temperament is far from being very precise or otherwise satisfactory.

Psychologists are wont to distinguish four different types, to which they have given the names

CHOLERIC—Easily provoked to anger; high tempered; fiery; irascible.

MELANCHOLIC (or Sentimental)—Melancholy; low spirited; downcast; sad.

SANGUINE—Of buoyant disposition; hopeful of the best; confident; light-hearted, vivacious or cheerful; ardent or enthusiastic.

PHLEGMATIC—Not easily aroused to feeling or action; sluggish, indifferent.

As to what we are to understand by the word temperament in general, I know of no better analysis than that of Lotze, who distinguishes differences in temperaments as follows:

"(1) Differences in kind and degree of excitability for external impressions; (2) the greater or less extent to which the ideas excited reproduce others; (3) the rapidity wit[illegible] (4) the strength with whi[illegible] and pain are associated [illegible] the ease with which ext[illegible] with these inner states th[illegible]

As to this difference i[illegible] much easier to propose so[illegible] than in the case of the [illegible] cussed. Suppose that we [illegible] peraments according to th[illegible] pairs:

Choleric
Melancholic

And now let us draw [illegible] these pairs (as indicated [illegible] then, that where the two [illegible] marriage are of temperam[illegible] of the lines drawn between [illegible] pairs, but not at a remote [illegible] on either side, the progn[illegible] riage is fortunate; otherwi[illegible]

Thus, for example, c[illegible] would be apt to arise bet[illegible] whom were extremely chol[illegible] gume, or one of whom w[illegible] and the other extremely [illegible] moderately sanguine would [illegible] and help to correct either t[illegible] or the moderately phlegmat[illegible]

In other words, marriag[illegible] different temperaments, bu[illegible] more likely to be happy th[illegible] persons of the same tem[illegible] greatly antagonistic tempe[illegible] tunately, nature has by mar[illegible] manifold resources for te[illegible] mixed up the different te[illegible] persons are examples of an[illegible]

Indeed, the late Sultan [illegible] the only person the writer [illegible] on his countenance and in [illegible] undisguised marks of a p[illegible] temperament. Still the rul[illegible] very phlegmatic people ahe[illegible] marrying sanguine ones, o[illegible] tal about making allianees [illegible] leric, and so forth, back[illegible] scheme.

When it comes to the co[illegible] moral conditions of fortu[illegible] much more sure of our gro[illegible] of the writer, there is no o[illegible] ductive of unhappy marria[illegible] as the spirit of frivolity ev[illegible] with respect to the marri[illegible] frivolity is the very essenc[illegible] in the marriage relation, an[illegible] misery.

Marriages contracted wit[illegible] of frivolity are almost i[illegible] misfits. For, as Humbole[illegible] ority undermines all mora[illegible] thought or pure feeling [illegible] lous soul nothing can em[illegible]

the prevailing spirit tably doomed to be s truly said: "Friv- and permits no deep rminate; in a frivo- from principle, and sacrifice and self-conquest are out of the question."

The "old-fashioned" marriage was apt to be decided upon and entered into with a sober forethought as to the lasting consequences of the step; if, indeed, it was not as a matter of course to be inaugurated by a religious ceremonial, or even considered as a so-called "sacrament." It is still treated as a sacrament by the Roman Catholic Church; and those who make use of the formulas prescribed by most of the religious denominations profess to take upon themselves the "vows" of "holy matrimony," "reverently, discreetly, advisedly, soberly and in the fear of God."

But who can believe that anything like all of those who, on social grounds or from the love of display or notoriety, insist upon a "church wedding," escape the sure judgment of entering into this most important of all human relations, in a spirit of frivolity?

I should scarcely know how to condense in a single word what seems to me the next most important thing of the mental and moral sort determining the happiness or unhappiness of the matrimonial venture. But I will call it "the due sense of partnership." And on this point it must be said that at the present time in this country the women are chiefly to blame

The social development of those peoples who had come in the past most to shape the relations of the two sexes when united in marriage, had made, in respect of this partnership, the woman dependent upon the man for her economic support, and the man dependent on the woman for a home and for offspring that he could publicly recognize as his own. In the prevailing dissolution or disarrangement of this partnership agreement, there has not as yet been any formal adjustment of the privileges and duties belonging to the arrangement itself.

This fact underlies a very large proportion of the rapidly increasing number of divorces. The man deserts the woman because she, in fact, does not make any home for him; the woman leaves the man complaining that he does not provide her with all the comforts or all the freedom from a laborious life to which she thinks her sex entitles her. But marriage must be some kind of a partnership; and what is fair for each of the partners must remain a question of no small importance

But, finally, it is character—that complex of the intellectual and the moral—which more than all other causes determines the happiness or unhappiness of the marriage relation. Where the character of both parties is established in habits of reasonable expectation as to what can be got out of life, and in worthy ideals as to what are the really important things of life, and in self-control under the aegis of moral principles, there is comparatively little danger of a complete misfit in the marriage relation

But where one party enters into this relation with the avowed intention of undertaking the complete intellectual uplift or moral reform of the other, the prospect is not bright. In a word, mesalliances are like all other kinds of matrimonial misfits.

The principal difference is this: They are the more likely to involve one or more of the permanent causes of unhappiness, common enough with all couples united in this closest of all human ties.

"Marriages contracted with the prevailing spirit of frivolity are almost inevitably doomed to be misfits. For, as Humboldt has truly said: 'Frivolity undermines all morality and permits no deep thought or pure feeling to germinate; in a frivolous soul nothing can emanate from principle, and sacrifice and self-conquest are out of the question.'" moved by a desire to see New York. The terse record in the Marriage License Bureau bears testimony that on November 22, Juliet Breitung, aged nineteen, and Max Frederick Kleist, twenty-three, were married by Dr. Charles Lewis Slattery, of Grace Church.

When the news of the marriage was broken to the Breitung household many kinds of trouble began

An outward symptom of an inward tumult was the abrupt departure of the former gardener to a mine in New Mexico. As abrupt was his departure from that temporary haven to another and hidden one. The banker, his wife, and their only child chose to ignore the romantic sequel to a Summer in the West. Their Summer will be spent in a region as remote from Marquette, Mich., as possible, should Kleist have returned from wandering to gardening

Undeterred by these examples of infelicity following mesalliances, Miss Elizabeth C. Coppell, an elderly spinster and heiress of Tenafly, N. J., tempted the matrimonial fates.

Miss Coppell occupied a beautiful home known as The Towers at Tenafly. This home of her father's was to be hers for life, or until she married. Life for this bachelor maid would have seemed to be one long sweet song. But into it entered a discord, placed there by Cupid, with the aid of her middle-aged chauffeur, Robert Darius Conners. Conners was married, but marriage, as any court record will amply prove, is not a state necessarily permanent. His wife fled with another, sending a note to a friend that she had "known much unhappiness" with Miss Coppell's chauffeur Conners secured a divorce, and a few months afterwards secretly married his wealthy employer

For seven months the heiress continued to live in her luxurious home and the apparent employe to receive her daily orders and his wage. It was a honeymoon trip to Atlantic City that revealed the fact of their secret marriage. It was one of a chain of honeymoon trips, the others remaining a secret.

Enraged by the news, the bride's brothers placed a guard around the estate and forbade their sister's return to it, asserting that by her marriage she had forfeited all right to its possession and tenancy. The brothers dismissed the servants who had been in the service of their sister and who had been companions in service of their unwelcome brother-in-law.

But their sister displayed a spirit as high as their own. Returning from her Atlantic City honeymoon she was driven by her bridegroom in his accustomed seat as chauffeur, to the office of a local attorney. Heavily veiled she descended from the car, engaged the attorney's services, received his advice, and accompanied by him, made a dash swift as a cavalry charge, for her home. Her chauffeur husband guiding the car they leaped up the hill, swung past the locked and guarded front gate, dashed in at the rear gates, and escorted by their attorney, hastened into the house. A policeman placed there by the brothers, permitted her to pass into the library.

When her brother arrived a little later, there was a brief parley, from which he retreated, after his sister's pointed reminder, pointed by an imperturbable attorney, that possession is nine points of the law.

But a huge lawsuit is preparing. How long the chauffeur's bride will be permitted by her brother to remain on the family estate, with her bridegroom as cumberer, is a subject for the grave cogitation of the courts.

A Charming Spring Serge, with the New Duff-Gordon Collar.

Taffeta and Lace Afternoon Dress.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

THE great Queen Cleopatra knew well what she was doing when she adopted as a headdress the body and wings of a vulture. Nothing could be more becoming than the close-fitting head and the sweeping curves of the outspread wings on either side of the face. It is surprising to me that these had not been adopted in later history and through all periods.

With the exception sometimes in the headdressing of Velasquez's paintings, I did not find those same lines repeated. But this season I made a most becoming wedding gown which had the train suspended from the forehead and hanging four yards on the ground behind. This, of course, necessitated a light material, and the idea was carried out in tulle edged with satin and embroidered with pearls. It was held close to the head with a tight band of orange blossoms and swept straight away free, giving on each side of the face the becoming lines that I refer to.

The photograph in the centre of the page is only another variety of the same idea. The whole dress, indeed, suggests the mediaeval, and might have been worn by Thais herself. It is, in the upper part, of flesh color chiffon, with little straps ornamented with diamonds. The body is of gold colored brocade draped around and tied in the centre front. An enormous veil coming from the head is of smoke colored gossamer. The whole thing suggests a gigantic moth, with outspread wings, which are fastened in this case to the lady's head and finger tips.

This type of dress is, of course, quite impractical for dinner purposes, but it has been adopted by many people of note in France in public—theatre boxes, etc. These people are usually literary or artistic people of the type of Mme. Masterlinck and Ida Rubinstein, who are a type quite of their own, and call for this odd kind of dressing, and I do not advise it to be taken up by any one who has not a thorough knowledge and sense of color and the handling of difficult draperies.

For the more normal type of people I give two pretty little dresses suitable for the South—the useful serge, with a light satin coat, and a soft taffeta and lace afternoon dress.

The blue serge is full and draped voluminously under the arm, where it is caught in with a row of buttons and two large pleats. The little coat repeats this opening in strappings of blue serge on the black satin of which it is composed. The high up-standing serge collar is sufficiently open at the front to reveal a knot in gold cords and colorings of Chinese design.

The little cherry colored hat is wreathed with bright cherries, and has a green lace veil. A green parasol completes this coat and skirt.

The little afternoon gown is of lavender taffeta, full, of course, and draped from the back toward the front and returning again to make a double check across the back. The apron is of white muslin embroidered with lavender and yellow flowers and valenciennes lace. A ruffle of the same lace is also worn around the neck, cuffs and brim of the yellow straw hat. Be sure and note the little beaded bag that is carried by this altogether charming young woman.

Still another gown consists of several vollings of chiffon, each one in a slightly deepening shade of pink. Strings of pearls are drawn over the bare shoulders and others are festooned all over the little wisp of a bodice, while on the skirt a curious effect is carried out entirely in pearls arranged in triple festoons.

We Can Be Free Only by Conquering Fear

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company
All Rights Reserved.

There Is No Slavery Like That of the Mind to Fear. Mankind Is Working Its Way Out of Its Tyranny, but There Can Never Be Real Freedom Until It Is Utterly Destroyed.

ONCE upon a time an old Quaker said to his son, "Hezekiah, thee will never see a worse devil than when thee looks into a mirror."

And, curiously enough, the entire thinking world has accepted the philosophy of the man whose faith was founded on friendship. No clergyman of any denomination now tells of "a personal devil." The devil exists now only in a poetic and symbolic way.

The place of "endless torment" also has been abolished, and well has it been said, "the tears of pity have put out the fire of hell." Purgatory is a condition of mind—when we are dominated by fear we can well say that we are being ruled by the devil. Satan symbolizes for us the powers of evil.

Hate, jealousy, doubt, are all manifestations or forms of fear. These things affect the circulation and cause indigestion. And indigestion is the parent of much misery. When we are hopeful, animated, happy—the devils of fear slumber and sleep.

There is no slavery equal to that which is forced upon the minds of men through the evil of fear The whole race is more or less, even yet, under the dominion of this torment of doubt. We anticipate trouble as a matter of habit. Lucky for us most of our troubles never happen And even death for those who live well is kindly, and comes as a deliverer, making the captive free.

As a race we have not yet worked our way out of mental slavery, but we are nearer the light now than ever before in all the history of mankind The very fact that we are struggling with the devil of fear—that we recognize him and are placing a just estimate on him is proof of progress.

Until yesterday, practically, man had reason for fear. Man did not have the scientific knowledge to cope with nature. Then he was ruled by doctors, lawyers and philosophers, and these three so-called learned professions kept man in subjection through fear.

Economic slavery followed as a matter of course, for man was despoiled of the result of his labor, and to a degree this is so yet

It will not do to blame "the learned men" entirely for this condition, for they themselves were under the subjection of fear. They believed the things that were taught, and this teaching had come down through the centuries and was proved by statements found in printed books, not from the facts of life. That things had been printed was regarded as proof positive that these things were truth

Reading and writing were miraculous manifestations. Any man who could read and write was exempt from criminal law. In the law there was a phrase, "benefit of the clergy."

The clergymen were the clerques or clerks—they kept the records. They were the only people who could read and write, and the fact that they could read and write was proof that they were superior beings, peculiar, unique—supermen. And if they were accused they could demand the "benefit of the clergy," which meant that they were exempt from the law that was binding on common men.

Slavery was a universal condition. Men and women captured in war were the property of the victor. Then the progeny of slaves were also slaves. And whole races were born in slavery and so continued.

To keep men and women in ignorance was regarded eminently right, just and proper. And to kill them if they rebelled was also proper. Hence we see there was something really to be afraid of.

Gradually there were formulated creeds that men and women were made to believe. These creeds were taught by attaches of the State, and anything outside of these creeds was regarded as wicked, wrong, dangerous, and penalties were attached for believing or expressing thoughts contrary to those established by law. Thus we get a condition of mental serfdom, with fear as a natural birthright.

Men who did not accept these creeds after being warned were deprived of their property, their ears were cut off, their noses slit, and if they were not killed outright they were exiled into the forest or across the sea

Rhode Island was once a place of refuge for the outcasts of Massachusetts Bay Colony—comes so close to us the days of mental slavery when the devil of fear was in the saddle.

Threats of what would happen here and in another world to the doubters were everywhere put forth authoritatively.

People who left Europe through lack of liberty came to America, and here they instituted the same tyrannies on others that they had experienced in England.

In America we did not sell white men in the public market, but we went across the sea and captured those with the dark skin and brought them to America, selling them like horses and cattle in the market places. And Rhode Island, which we have called the home of liberty, grew prosperous through the traffic in human flesh.

The hand of man has been set against his brother to injure, to disgrace, to coerce, to oppress.

So has the idea of the divine right of slavery taken hold of us that a great number of employers only pay enough to supply food and shelter, just as we give a horse oats, a stall and a blanket—and sometimes we omit the blanket.

These things have all been regarded as legitimate and right. Men were afraid of men, and well had they reason for fear, for government was largely framed with the intent of holding men in slavery in order that other men might thrive.

The philosophers fought for an institution, not for truth. The medical profession sought to sustain a medical fetich, and the matter of health was quite secondary

The law looked out for lawyers, and even yet most of the laws passed have a weather eye out for the welfare of the legal profession.

From slavery, however, we have moved slowly in the direction of a government of the people, by the people and for the people

The biggest advance in the line of human freedom has come from the fact that we have abolished the devil as a personality and recognize that we are enslaved to-day by our limitations in the inability to control our thought.

We must get free mentally, and when we are free in thought we will be free in person and in estate. So the subject of freedom, America is a study of psychology, and psychology is the science of the tides that play through the human mind.

God no longer exists for us as a big man. We, however, believe in the Supreme Intelligence that rules the world; we behold this intelligence manifested in a million forms—in leaf, in bud and flower, in the flying, singing birds, in the running animals But, unhappily, man has not been the enemy of man—he has been the enemy of bird and the wild animals until to-day they flee at his approach. The tyranny that man has visited on man he has passed along to the animal kingdom

We free ourselves from the devil of fear, just in proportion as we recognize the right of life in the bird and in all of our dumb brothers As we give to others the right to think, to act, to live, to love, so do we give freedom to ourselves Fear tends to bring about the evil condition that we anticipate

Said old Job, fifteen centuries before Christ,
The evil that I feared has come to pass

We must think the good, live the good, act the good, express the good; then will happiness come and make her home with us.

"Cast thy bread upon the waters and it shall return after many days," is a great, practical commonsense truth

Cast thy bread upon the waters and it shall return to you, shortly, buttered. The thoughts that we give out, if they are evil, come back to plague us

If, however, we give out thoughts of kindness, generosity and good will, these all come back to bless us As a man thinketh in his own heart, so is he.

People who believe in a personal devil will more or less impersonate the personal devil—they will be the devil! And their actions will be of a sort that make others believe in the literal doctrine of purgatory

Most happily now, however, we recognize the truth that self preservation demands that we shall give liberty to others in order that liberty may be our own sweet portion

"Do unto others as you would be done by," is not a vacuous, hazy uncertain saying. It is a very practical everyday truth, and so we find one of the world's greatest authors writing a series of articles entitled "The Golden Rule in Business."

In the newspapers we read of various great institutions, and of men, who are incorporating the Golden Rule as a policy in business, and who make it pay

This is a phase of thought that would have been considered highly theoretical a few years ago. Now the world accepts it almost as a truism and all clergymen of all denominations agree in the proposition that the world is what we think it to be in our own hearts. The distortions of the imagination that once blackened for us the sky were caused by man's inhumanity to man.

This ill treatment inspired a perpetual condition of fear And a belief in devils, in evil spirits and in vile, villainous places of punishment, followed, until these nightmares became fixed in the faith of the race, and were taught in colleges and pictured in print.

All of these dark figments of the imagination have found place in books They are the nightmares of the past, but the day is at hand. We have more faith than ever before—faith in ourselves, faith in our fellows, faith in our destiny, and we believe that the power which sustains us here will never desert us there.

What the future holds in store we do not say, because we do not know, but we all agree that to live rightly here and now is the best preparation for the life to come, and to live here and now we must eliminate from our minds the devil of fear.

Emerson says: "The universe is planned for good." Franklin wrote: "Everything and everybody helps the man who is trying to help himself."

This is what is meant in the scriptural passage, "And He will give His angels charge over thee." The angels of Love and Light are with the man who is in a loving mood. There is a physical law which provides that no body can be in two places at one time. So in the realm of spirits no two moods can possess the mind at one time.

And the summing up of the argument is that "perfect love casteth out fear." And when the angels of love, hope, courage, faith, kindness and generosity are with us the imps of darkness wing their way.

And then all good things are ours.

Pres. Eliot on the Crying Need of a Regenerated Christianity and petitions, the granting of which by the God

Who could imagine that the chief teachings of the founder of the religion which these nations and churches profess were, love God and the neighbor, and treat all men as brothers? Clearly neither nations nor churches have ever been truly Christian.

It is a fitting time, therefore, to which to seek the reasons for the impotency of the Christian churches to promote effectively the moral and physical welfare of mankind on this earth, whatever they may claim to do in respect to human happiness in another. The first explanation is that institutional Christianity departed early from the teachings of the founder of the religion, and copied in its structure the authoritative and hierarchical arrangements, and in its doctrine the materialism of the Roman world.

Doctrine of Fear Blamed for Present Chaos.

The churches have not relied on the essential dignity of human nature and the human love of freedom for the uplifting of the race, but, on the contrary, on man's tendency to sin and his fear of the consequences, and on his too-frequent degradation in this world and his hope of salvation in another. Not believing in liberty, the churches have habitually supported autocratic government, and that climax of autocracy, military discipline for purposes of conquest.

The second explanation of the impotency of the Christian churches to prevent war, or promote peace, is to be found in the unethical quality of some of the doctrines of the Christian churches, as crystallized in their dogmas and creeds. The official creeds of the great churches of Christianity and many parts of the Scriptures contain conceptions of God's nature and of His action toward the human race which are intolerable to the ethical mind of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

The creeds of the evangelical churches are, as a rule, built on the "fall of man" as described in the story of the Garden of Eden, the absolute correctness or trustworthiness of the story itself being assumed on the ground that its author was inspired by God Himself. The conduct attributed to God in that story would be gladly unworthy of any man whose less magnitude of celestial bodies.

Creeds That Conflict with Modern Conceptions of Justice.

The Lamb of God was sacrificed for the sin of the world, and so some small proportion of the human race was rescued from eternal torment to justify by their eternal happiness, so far as they might, the original creation of a feeble race tricked into sin. The creeds of the great churches differ as to the proportion of the race really rescued by the vicarious atonement through Jesus Christ, but they all agree in making this vicarious atonement necessary to the salvation of any proportion of the race.

In these days, the whole conception of one young human or divine sufferings innocent, for the sins of another, by an unthinkable others, [illegible] of justice and [illegible] shool and ho[illegible] the innocent, when the guilty were known in order that the guilty might escape punishment? Any human father would be outraged! A suggestion that he had ever dealt, or could so deal with his children, and yet every member of the great Christian churches is supposed to believe that God deals in that way with the human race; and that the victim offered up for the redemption of a portion of the human was, in a peculiar sense, the son of God!

Changes Suggested Which Would Increase Christian Efficiency.

Before the Christian churches can expected to be efficient in the promotion of human welfare, and particularly in the bringing of peace on earth, they must purge themselves of such doctrines as these. It is not enough to say in defense of the churches that in no church members in good standing no one believe these shocking doctrines; they should be eliminated from the published standards and confessions of the churches.

The historical Christian churches were early made partners with empires, monarchies and baronies in the control and oppression of the masses of mankind, and the governments being maintained by force, the churches became, in general, supporters of the military regime. This was natural enough, because the God of the Christian churches, like Israel's God, was commonly thought of as Lord of Hosts, God of battles, successful leader, and Glorious Conqueror.

These martial attributes of God were described with glowing fervor in the Hymns, descriptions and thanksgivings of the churches. Joshua's God was the most ruthless of destroyers. Not so destructive, however, as the German Emperor's God to-day; because he evidently lacked the power to destroy everything that he wished to destroy: "And the Lord was with Judah; and he drave out the inhabitants of the mountain, but could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, because they had chariots of iron." Some of the Canaanites successfully resisted the Lord of the Israelite hosts, but in these later days the Belgians could not successfully resist the Lord of the German hosts. This conception of God is hideous, cruel and insane and the Christian church which tolerates it can be efficient in the promotion of human welfare and happiness.

Not only is the God of the great Christian churches often a War God, but the Christian life itself is often represented in Christian hymn and preachings as a battle. The Christian fights against Satan and the powers of darkness; he goes forth to war against the evils and wrongs of his day: "The Son of God goes forth to war, a kingly crown to gain"—meaner of motives. The saint wears armor, the armor of the mediæval battlefield and the archangels and the knights set upon the dragons and fiends, and slay them with swords.

A large part of the imagery of Christian literature is drawn from the work of soldiers and armies. "Onward Christian soldiers, marching as to war," is to-day one of the favorite hymns of the Protestant churches. This form of habitual association which has gradually undermined the capacity of the Church to advance in modern Europe the cause of justice, mercy and liberty and hence of peace and good will.

The Christian nations have, however, attained since the middle ages to a civilization which seems to modern men in Christian lands higher than that of the non-Christian nations, except in the prevalence of international war and fighting in general. For at least six hun-

Science Affording Real Aid to War Sufferers.

And now, within the last five months, the worst war of all recorded time—worst because of the wide extent, the fury with which it is prosecuted, and the destructive power of its new implements—brings unheard-of misse upon the human race, and one Christian churches are helpless to prevent it, or even to mitigate its horrors. The effective organiza[illegible] [illegible] skilfully small relief as can [illegible] [illegible] best part not religious in [illegible] The care of the wounded falls on [illegible] and women trained in natural and physical [illegible] and possessing manual skill and [illegible] service.

The effective works of mercy are performed not chiefly by representatives of the churches or by religious partisans and zealots, but by men and women who understand how to administer food to the starving, to bring first aid to the wounded and carry them quickly to hospitals, to prevent fevers and infections, to purify water supplies, and to treat lockjaw, gangrene and frostbite. The effective advocates of peace and good will among men in this horrible convulsion are not those produced by a nation which believes in the policy, ruthless force and the domination of the strong over the weak, are not the priests and ministers of traditional Christianity, or the performers of rites and ceremonies, but the workers of public liberty as the indispensable source of the highest efficiency in individual or nation, and of public justice and righteousness developed under free governmental institutions which train men to self-control in freedom under law.

The great European war is fundamentally a conflict between freedom and democracy on the one side, and the rule of hereditary monarchs and a military class on the other, that rule being maintained by appeals to love of country and national pride, and enforced by military discipline which leaves nothing of liberty to the individual. In this strife the Christian Church as a whole is divided, each national church supporting its own nation, and by inheritance and tradition each national church supports the war-making power, no matter how cruel, deceitful and faithless that power may prove to be. In short, the established and conventional churches manifest in the power to promote either love of God or love to the neighbor.

People Turning to New Teachings of Enlightenment.

Is this ineffective condition the final issue of the teachings of Jesus Christ, or is it not the result of the structure of the institutions and the quality of the doctrines in which these teachings have been embodied and set forth?

To this question a great many nations of Europe and America reply that such a discussion has no interest for them, that they have not only rejected the traditional dogmas of established Christianity, but that they have no interest in discussing them, that the vital movements of the human spirit have taken many promising directions; and that they are concerned not with the Christian churches, but with the new powers which make for liberty, enlightenment and progress.

Multitudes of these men say that they are ready for any sort of social service, and at the present multitudes of them in France and England are showing by their voluntary acts that they are ready to suffer and die in the cause of freedom; while other multitudes [illegible] in number, permit themselves to be driven to wounds and death in the cause of [illegible] discipline, force and domination. On both sides millions of men are exhibiting extraordinary self-sacrifice and devotion, natural fruits of the spirit of Jesus Christ; but most of these heroes have not consciously derived, these lofty prominents from the Christian churches, but are moved by the common loves of family, home and country.

President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard

For two generations the men that have been doing, and are now doing, the work of the world have, in large measure, withdrawn from the organized churches, or maintain but a nominal connection with them a connection, however, which often includes considerable payments to the churches on behalf of their wives and children. Educated men as a rule, in both Europe and America, have ceased to be influenced in their opinions or their actions by the dogmas of the churches, by the rewards churches offer, or by the punishments they threaten.

Church No Longer Centre of Social Recognition.

Sunday has become a day for physical rest in outdoor refreshment, for attention to the family, or for the enjoyment of music sometimes at the church, but always at the club, the park, or the concert hall. With trifling exceptions, the church is no longer the centre of social recognition, or of social enjoyments for the multitude. The granges and trades unions, the neighborhood clubs, and the numerous benevolent societies provide in many communities the needed opportunities for social intercourse which church meetings used to provide.

In former times the Christian churches were the almoners for the poor and desolate, and the chief works of mercy were carried on by men and women especially commissioned by the Christian Church. Now, secular societies, administered by laymen carry on many of the principal movements for the improvement of society—such as the Civil Service Reform Leagues, the Playground Associations, the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations, and the Associations for Baby, School, Social and Mental Hygiene, and many of the hospitals, dispensaries and asylums, whether supported by taxation or by the voluntary contributions of public-spirited persons, are works of people whose motive power is not derived from the churches.

To be sure, many churches have of late taken up some kinds of social work, but in such labors the churches are as a rule less effective than the lay societies. Even in its function of teaching children what religion is, what right conduct is, and what the motives are which lead to right conduct the Church has much to learn. The Sunday school does not compare favorably in method or results with the weekday school, even as a teacher of elementary [illegible] methods, adequate time and the support of parents.

The fundamental trouble is that the Christian churches as bodies and organized have relied for centuries on imposed beliefs, rites, sacraments, symbols and observances. Since the latter years of the eighteenth century it has become more and more difficult to impose beliefs on educated people, and intelligent men have steadily lost faith in mysticism and symbolism, and have come to rely more and more on the careful ascertainment of facts, the human reason and the natural sentiments of reverence and love. They have also come to prefer for themselves and their families liberty, independence and public order founded on agreed upon law, to obedience, submission and order founded on discipline administered to the many by the few. With these new tendencies of the human spirit the great Christian churches are not in full accord.

The great Christian churches have always supported the claim of absolute monarchs that they rule by Divine right; but in the modern world only ignorant or archaic persons accept that doctrine. The mystic has always believed that in some unimaginable way he is the recipient, on occasion, of direct revelations from God through faculties or means of perception in himself which are instinctive rather than reasonable, but the advance in man's knowledge of nature, and in his power to apply to his own uses the natural forces, has made it harder than it used to be for an intelligent man to be a mystic.

The thinking person who is enduring a life of suffering now, on this earth, is much less disposed than he used to be to accept as a real consolation another imagined life free from the struggles and pains of the present life. In other words, the consolations and hopes which the Christian churches have heretofore imparted to suffering human beings are to-day far less efficacious than they were in the first eighteen centuries. Neither the heaven nor the hell of the Christian churches appeals to the modern man as it formerly did to his predecessors.

Calls Churches Helpless in Present Catastrophe.

The condition of Europe at this moment is the last and most convincing demonstration that the great churches of Christendom have lost their power to keep Man from sin, to guide him on an upward path, and to make him happy; for the churches are helpless in presence of this terrible mass of long-planned, elaborately contrived human sin, shame and suffering, although the mass is shot through by splendid gleams of courage, self-sacrifice and patriotic devotion.

The religious state of Christendom to-day is therefore a melancholy spectacle. Mankind needs to worship, needs incitements to love, reverence and duty, and a happy spiritual conception of the universe. Without these helps, Man cannot possibly be happy in his family, his labor, or his social order. Without these conceptions of the finite and the infinite values, Man cannot rise in his nature or use life from bad to good, and from good to better.

No single personality born in Christendom—and no class of persons—can reach his best without accepting as his guides in life the fundamental teachings of Jesus Christ—love God and the neighbor, have compassion on the wronged and the desolate, seek the truth the free, and worship God in spirit and in truth.

What then is the renewed Christianity which these terrible times we are living in cry out for in the midst of tears and heart-breaking sorrows? It is a Christianity which abandons the errors and the unjust, cruel conceptions which the centuries have piled up on the simple teachings of Jesus. It is a Christianity which sympathizes with and supports the aspirations of mankind for freedom—freedom in thought, speech and action. It is a Christianity which hallows and consecrates birth, marriage, the bringing up of children, family life, the earnings of the livelihood, and death, and rejects all the aspersions on the natural life of Man which Christianity inherited from paganism and Judaism.

What the New Christianity Will Be.

It is a Christianity which will be the friend and ally of all that is good and ennobling in literature, science and art, and will avail itself without fear of all the new means of teaching and helping men which successive generations shall discover, and of all the innocent enjoyments and social pleasures, while resisting effectively every unwholesome or degrading influence on human society. It is a Christianity which will recognize that the pursuit of happiness in this world is legitimate for every human being, and that the main function of government is to protect and further men in that pursuit by securing to the community health, education, wholesome productive labor and liberty.

Do you ask if there exist in the world any exemplars of this sort of Christianity? Fortunately for the future of the world, there are to be found in nearly every Christian communion individuals who illustrate in their personal lives the purity and power of the simple religion taught by Jesus Christ.

Finding themselves practically free to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with their God, they remain in the churches into which they were born, hold there by family ties, sweet associations or conservative sentiment, and inattentive to the inconsistencies between their life of the spirit and the historical doctrines of the churches to which they belong. They are all exemplars of the renewed Christianity of which there is such crying need, and many of them are active promoters of that renewal.

After all, true Christianity is not a body of doctrines, or an official organization to conduct and control men's minds and wills. It is a way of life.

BRANDEIS ON THE WAR

With half the civilized world at war absolute famine threatens the life of millions. In the name of "God and humanity" they are appealing to us, a free people, to assist them. FAMINE [illegible] and far reaching [illegible] the fate of every Jew and every Gentile in Palestine and Syria as a direct result of the Old World war today.

In addition to the assistance already planned for [illegible],000 starving Jews [illegible] the borders of Poland, Galicia and Austria, immediate relief must be given these war stricken sufferers in the "Holy Land" to prevent their total destruction.

A round half-million dollars must be raised by popular subscription at once, to charter and load an emergency relief ship, that shall be dispatched to Palestine without unnecessary delay.

The Jews of every State in our nation today are furnishing temporary relief to these famine stricken war refugees, but that temporary relief is inadequate enough in the present crisis.

This is a humane work that should be taken up by Catholics, by Protestants, by Mohammedans, by all kinds and all conditions of American citizens before the danger can be averted.

A Jewish relief ship will sail from New York to Jaffa as soon as the necessary food supplies are available. Food for the starving Gentiles as well as for the unfortunate Jews, should be provided before this voyage is undertaken.

To make possible the fullest co-operation of all classes in this work the different Jewish relief committees cheerfully will distribute all food provided for any group in the famine zones of Palestine and Syria, in addition to the specific relief work these committees were organized to carry forward.

The essential thing to remember at this moment is that death by actual starvation is imminent on all sides there today, and that at least a half-million dollars will be required to charter and load with substantial food the relief-ship in question.

Neither race nor religious prejudice can be allowed to interfere with this humane duty that the free-born and the free-sworn citizens of our neutral nation are privileged to perform.

The Rt. Rev. Godfrey Hunt, O. F. M. vice-commissary of the Holy Land, and located at Mount Sepulchre, has stated that the powerful resources of the he represents is anxious to co-operate with our Jewish committees in helping provide an ample cargo for our relief-ship.

Similar pledges of assistance have been received from a number of Protestant ministers interested in missionary work, who are keenly alive to the dangers to which their co-religionists are subjected.

That the Jews themselves will not be found wanting in this terrible time of trial is evidenced by the fact that from every quarter of the globe voluntary donations of money are being received from our Jewish friends each day.

Through our agents at Alexandria more than $60,000 has been distributed among some 2,100 needy families in the famine belt to date.

One young man sent in $2 to be forwarded to his aged parents, in still another case $1,000 was handed over to our committee to be transmitted to a specific family there; in every instance, our committee successfully has made the required transfer, free of cost to the interested parties.

Acting under authority given us by Secretary of State Bryan our committee has deposited with the United States consul at Alexandria sufficient gold to enable him to pay out the equivalent of all moneys received here for the relief of any person living in the "Holy Land" and its immediate vicinity.

But gold alone cannot save the hunger-driven populace of the "Holy Land," because food is so scarce that even gold rapidly is becoming almost valueless in the great emergency with which they are confronted.

With 120,000 Jews in Palestine, including the 18,000 living at the forty-three Zionist colonies fully half their number today are on the verge of starvation.

Equally grave conditions obtain among the Catholic and the Protestant missionaries, whose needs are as urgent as those of their more numerous Jewish neighbors.

Ambassador Morgenthau and Secretary of State Bryan are in possession of definite data showing the necessity of immediate relief for all non-combatants in the entire territory referred to.

[illegible] received from [illegible] relief workers, trustworthy men in every respect, a vivid summary of the needs of the people is set forth.

Over a region containing a larger population than Belgium's, a heart-rending measure of dire want and misery is known to exist.

To send money or anything else through the usual channels of communication obviously is impossible with the government of the land involved in the titanic war now being waged by half the civilized world.

The always meagre food supplies of Palestine-Syria, still further reduced by military necessity, have almost totally disappeared.

Banks that were built up by generations of self-sacrifice among the toilers, banks having the entire reserve fund of thousands, have been closed without the formality of a notice to the desperate depositors.

The flower of the Jewish race, the very finest of our young men from the Zionist colonies, have been sent to the front to sicken or die a violent death as the exigencies of the war may chance to determine.

On every hand the once prosperous factories, workshops and farms lie idle and business [illegible] stagnant.

Terror [illegible] surrounding [illegible] of women [illegible] the aged men and women have almost abandoned all [illegible].

Unofficial [illegible] filtering in from outlying colonies [illegible] Jewish maidens [illegible] assaulted and of blood curdling [illegible] of vengeance following the temporary [illegible] of the endangered Jewish girls.

The arming of "desert Arabs" and fierce tribes of Bedouins, and the [illegible] of all Jews is intimated in these cablegrams, and the following extract is from one of the appeals reaching us:

THE TIME HAS NOT YET COME TO RELATE TO THE WORLD THE NOBLE, GENEROUS ACTION IN OUR DISTRESS BY THE AMERICAN PEOPLE, AND THE INDEFATIGABLE EFFORTS OF THE AMERICAN AMBASSADOR AT CONSTANTINOPLE, BESIDES THE AMERICAN CONSULS AND OFFICERS AND MEN OF THE AMERICAN NAVY NOW IN SYRIAN WATERS.

THESE ACTS REMAIN ENGRAVED WITHIN THE HEARTS OF ISRAEL AND ENCOURAGE US TO RAISE OUR APPEAL TO THE AMERICAN NATION.

WE KNOW THAT THE WHOLE WORLD SUFFERS NOW, AND IF WE RAISE THIS APPEAL IT IS NOT ONLY FOR THE PROTECTION OF OUR LIVES, PROPERTIES OR HONOR OF OUR DAUGHTERS, BUT FOR THE CONSCIOUSNESS OF HAVING WORKED IDEALLY IN PALESTINE.

OUR COLONIES REPRESENT THE REGENERATION OF A PEOPLE UNJUSTLY OPPRESSED FOR TWENTY CENTURIES.

OUR SCHOOLS, COLLEGES, REVIVED LANGUAGES OF OUR PROPHETS, NOW THE MOTHER LANGUAGE OF THE JEWISH YOUTH IN PALESTINE; THEREFORE, WE BELIEVE TO HAVE RIGHT IN SAYING THAT NOT ONLY OUR HOUSES, FIELDS AND LIVES ARE ENDANGERED, BUT OUR IDEAL AND HOPE IS THREATENED WITH DESTRUCTION.

IN VIEW OF THE FOREGOING, THE PRESENCE OF AMERICAN MAN-OF-WAR IN THE VICINITY OF JAFFA IS MOST DESIRABLE.

SUPPLIES ARE MOST URGENTLY NEEDED; THEIR DISTRIBUTION IS CONSIDERED SAFE UNDER THE AMERICAN CONSULAR SUPERVISION AT JAFFA.

IN THE NAME OF THE HOLY LAND IN THE NAME OF THE BOOK WHOSE LANGUAGE WE REVIVED, WHOSE SPIRIT AND PREDICTION WE ENDEAVOR TO REALIZE WE IMPLORE THE NOBLE AND POWERFUL AMERICAN NATION TO USE ITS INFLUENCE AND SAVE THE JEWISH COLONIZATION WORK IN PALESTINE.

Again, in a [illegible] from [illegible] ambassador [illegible] as transmitting [illegible] ment at Washington [illegible] statement [illegible] made.

The Ambassador at Constantinople requests the department to inform you that Commander Decker of the Tennessee had telegraphed that urgent need for supplies be forwarded from America to Jews in Palestine. Sick Women Attention

Is it possible there ... an in this country who continues to suffer ... Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for women—and every week we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

From Mrs. S. T. Richmond, Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"For the benefit of ... who suffer as I have ... Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound ... I was ... I doctored and ... I was ... nervous prostrate ... Lydia E. From Mrs. Maria Irwin, Peru, N. Y.

PERU, N. Y.—"Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was very irregular and had much pain. I had lost three ... The ... medicine helped me as nothing else had done, and I am thankful every day that I took it."—MRS. MARIA IRWIN, R. F. D. 4, PERU, N. Y.

From Mrs. Jane D. Duncan, W. Quincy, Mass.

SOUTH QUINCY, MASS.—"The doctor said that I had organic ... I had ... and I did not get any relief. ... Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound ... MRS. JANE D. DUNCAN, 1 Bacon Street, West Quincy, Mass.

FASTENINGS AT BACK

Marquisette Revival Here

of this model are short. Indeed it looks as if the short sleeve is to be coming into its own once more, particularly in relation to afternoon frocks and in formal evening dresses.

London Society continues to demand a frock of black, with the entire model of chiffon or net.

Caroline is the ruler of a peculiar shirt, worth buying for a permanent addition to the wardrobe, but is looped up over the hips to show the very attractive frock that gave a dippedin effect at the back. The model is a princess, and from the top of heavy jet there falls a fringe of jet and beaded balls. It is hung on an elastic ribbon line and gives the effect of tabs to the waist. A fold of white tulle lies flat and is used for the shoulder straps and is also seen. A cluster of small pink rose flowers gives the necessary touch of youth to the frock.

Green and color combinations are going to prove very popular this season. A great deal of ruffling draperies and apologies and ruffles in the form of small ruffles are also seen. A very unusual model is made of white satin party model with bodice and sleeves made of white chiffon. The bodice is cut in the form of a deep V, and the sleeves are short. The skirt is made of white satin with a short tunic of white chiffon. The tunic is draped with a deep band of white satin ribbon. The band starts at the left side of the front and ends at the right side of the back. The ribbon is caught with a large bow of white satin ribbon. Fisherman's Garb Creates a Fashion

Early fashions put out by Worth and Jay Bernard are modifications of the costumes worn by fishermen on the Isle of Marken in the Zuyder Zee.

The skirt tapers to a comparatively narrow line, although this must not be interpreted to mean a maintenance of the lead.

Bernard is particularly well known for his excellent tailor-made, and he has a unique knowledge among the Americans. He is very liberal in the use of fur.

New Way of Posing Rose

Flowered Coatees

The gaily flowered coatees are on the way back. They are distinctly of a Directoire type sheer in front and just a trifle longer at the back. Some of these are cut in the back from waist line and slit finished rear with small buttons. And the sleeves are full puff sleeves too. Of course, one can tell positively what the fashions will be announced, but they will be altered to suit the individual. But it is certain that the famous dressmakers will have prepared their models with an eye to the individual and the adjustments necessary to make the garments become her. Therefore, it is fair to assume they will have an imitatory vogue. If nothing more.

The Foundation of Health

Bailey's Rubber Bath Brush with its peculiar circular bone edges produces a healthy action by opening the pores, increasing circulation and renewed vigor courses through the body.

Bailey's Rubber Bath Brush is always clean—sanitary—can be used by the entire family. It rubs away the effete portions of the skin, leaving a healthy glow.

"Back to the Kitchen China You Love"

(To the Tune of "Back to the Carolina You Love")

By "HANK"

In a humble kitchen she
Fixed up beans and hash,
But a singer she would be
And all records she'd smash;
So one day she wandered out
All the managers to rout,
Sang for them till they did shout,
Blasting her hopes with a crash:

CHORUS.

Gone are the days when you could warble in the minor,
Your voice provokes us all to laughter;
You'll make a hit a-calling "Hash, with eggs above."
So grab your lid and beat it kid,
Hurry right back,
Hurry right back,
Back to the kitchen china you love.

So she married some poor gink,
But he little knew
When he forged the wedding link
What he'd have to go through.
Seven years he suffered, till
One day he fell very ill,
On the undertaker's bill
She found this written there, too.

MONTAGUE'S COLUMN

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

One Must Draw the Line Somewhere

The guests at the Hotel de Gink, the hobo hotel in New York, have barred Harry Kemp, the hobo-poet, from their midst.

WE may be humble hoboes wot don't know etiquette,
An' never gets exclusive about who's in our set
We'll set down wit' a burglar, a yegg or holdup man
An' never ask no questions if he will kush de can
We'll even talk to highbrows; but stand fer poets—Nix!

WE got our reg'lar standards, all'ough we're simple 'boes,
We don't care much for manners, we don't go much on clo'es.
When we receive a handout like cake, preserves or pie,
We never miss de finger bowls if they should turn up shy
We're happy an' contented, we'll share our lowly lot

DON'T tink because we're ragged an' seedy lookin' guys
From sleepin' on de brakebeams an' trudgin' on de ties:
We don't make no distinctions between de kind o' blokes
Dat we had ought o' train wit' and other sorts o' folks
We may be humble hoboes, but when we pass de pie

The Preparedness of the Unprepared.

Mr. Bryan does not believe in armaments, but we notice that he never goes into a district infested by hostile rabbits without taking his shotgun along.

Financial Independence.

Why doesn't Mexico assure an overflowing treasury by putting a small per capita tax on her ex-Presidents?

Constatent.

Mr. Taft announces that he is in favor of one term for a President. In his case only Utah and Vermont held contrary views

Good Politics

A bill has been introduced which divides the State of Texas into two parts. This will enable the President to take all the Cabinet members instead of a beggarly two or three from Colonel House's district.

It Will Sell, All Right.

Mr. Bryan is writing a new book, the possession of which will be the preliminary test of a deserving Democrat.

None Too Remote

There are a lot of barely perceptible islands in the West Indies, but Mr. Bryan has got friends holding down jobs on all of them

Score One for Jack.

Jack Johnson will be arrested as soon as he reaches Mexico, which will make him one arrest ahead of Richard Harding Davis

The Intellectual Cow.

"Eat bran. It's the best food for real health known," says a member of the food reform league. That advice, we can say without fear of successful contradiction, will be scrupulously followed in every barnyard in the country.

A Winner.

The Western "Buy a bushel of wheat" movement seems to have succeeded beyond the wildest expectations of its originators.

Dead Ones.

"HOW big was Alexander, pa,
That people called him great?"
"Why, he did not amount to much,
He couldn't heattate."
"How great was General Bonaparte
Who ran the last big war?"
"Oh, not so great; the fox trot was Not in his repertoire."
What size was George H. Washington
Sage, soldier, statesman, planter?"
"Why, he was not worth mentioning
He never could waltz-canter.
In other days those guys, my son,
Acquired prodigious reps,
But they would be a sorry lot
At doing these new steps!"

Maybe He Will.

There's No Place Like Home.

A Trifle Too Sporting.

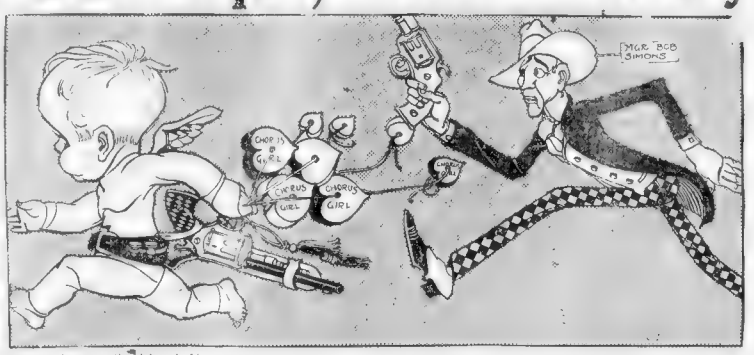
On the stage, as well as in real life, the curious crowd watches the nail driver in action

Gayety Girls, Loveliest in Burlesque, Arrive Today

"I just can't make those girls' eyes behave," says Manager Bob Simons. "And then another of my chorus becomes the wife of a millionaire



"It not the war or the high cost of living that causes my trouble!" says Manager Bob. "It's little Danny Cupid, and I'm after him with a six shooter."

And Manager Bob Simons, Having Lost Five of the Merry Merry by Matrimony in One Short Season, Will Leave the Comedians to Their (New) Wives and Guard His Choristers With Guns.

Mr. Simons went further. He declined to say whether the young people of the merry, merry will detrain at Back Bay or the South Station.

"I have heard," said Mr. Simons, musingly, that there is a station called Forest Hills."

Asked what he meant by this old Bob—who

Mr. Simons, Mr. Gus Fay, the tie man comedian, and Miss Ina Hayward of the Hayward sisters, novelty musical entertainers, and Harry K. Morton, Irish comedian, and Miss Zella Russell, a Revere girl, known to the theatre as the "queen of pianists."

When Ina Hayward came to the Gayety Girls

Bob Simons says: "Why

Mrs. Simons and Mrs. Morton will go the troupe.

On the other hand, your chorus girl cannot hope to marry a principal. What, therefore, can the poor girl do, except to look about and carefully or otherwise make her selection from among the millionaires, etc., who are continually chasing after the ladies of the theatrical profession in the hope of pulling off a little publicity?

Ina Hayward Fay's sister Maude, who is the other half of the Hayward sisters' act, and who is also the only woman in the United States playing a solo on the tuba saxophone, surprised the Gus Fays in Providence the other night at a little dinner at the Hotel Newman. The cards read like this:

Miss Maud Hayward
Requests your presence at a luncheon to be tendered to
MR. and MRS. GUS FAY
at the Hotel Newman,
February 1st eleven thirty a. m.

Bill Hanford wished the Fays success.

Mr. Feeley, celebrated the country over for his acrobatic dance, advised Brother Fay on the proper method of handling a domestic squawl. "We all have 'em, Mr. Fay, and you have 'em. I believe I have the best little wife in the world and we—even we—have our little spats. And I'll own up tonight, Gus, for your benefit, that I am always glad to crawl back and make up." (Applause from the chorus.)

One by one the ladies of the Beauty Chorus wished Mr. and Mrs. Gus Fay "all the luck in the world," until there wasn't any more luck to wish them, and at 2 o'clock Mr. Simons ordered all his children off to bed.

The one reporter present observed that Manager Simons during the last hour of the seven-course dinner had been looking longingly down the long banquet table facing the newlyweds, but full three-quarters of a mile away from them. It was clear that Manager Simons elected to sit among the chorus ladies, beauties to the right of him and beauties to the left of him, beauties all around him.

Mr. Simons explained, subsequently, by saying that one of the principal girls of the show is Bobbie Vernon (dog's pronounce it Vernon to Providence), a lovely Providence girl.

"All the week," Mr. Simons confessed last night, "I've had scouts out after Bobbie for fear some old Providence swain would be showing her a cottage in the suburbs and asking her if it isn't about time to abandon her study of political geography. If I lose another one of these rosebuds this season, I'll be ready to go up to Muldoon's, at White Plains, for a long, long rest. The strain is nerve-racking."

The fame of the Gayety Girls having gone up and down the land, the show has played to smashing business in a season called theatrically dull all over the country.

Prominent players say this wonderful success in an off year is due, first of all, to the drolleries of Gus Fay and Harry Morton, the Barbary Coast dance of Mickey Feeley and Mabel McCloud, the playing of Zella Russell—once the leader of the Bowdoin Square orchestra—the thumbing of Harry Evans and the snap and ginger contributed to "The Beauty Doctor" by Mae Holden.

There are others, however—and their name is legion—who hold that the Jacobs and Jermon chorus-girl "chooser" is the greatest picker in the American garden of beauty and who will tell you if you listen, that the Gayety Girls would still be a box office success if the principals walked on and off reading from United States census reports or the city directory.

On their visit to Boston seven weeks ago, the Gayety Girls were seen in the West End. This week they appear at the Gaiety, so if you happen to notice traffic blockades in Washington street, just south of Boylston, you'll know what it is all about.

The Gayety Girls will detrain this afternoon at the South Station. Business Manager Jack [illegible] will be among the ladies tussel to [illegible] Providence, preceded and followed by [illegible].

Nothing like that will [illegible] Manager Bob Simons will form the ladies of the company in lines of four, with Stage Manager Feeley, Joe Mullen, Al Clark and Bill Hanford acting as bodyguard.

Thus organized, the troopers will proceed ostentatiously through Summer, Washington, Boylston and Tremont streets to their hotel, attracting as little notice as possible. The company will shun the spotlight except in the show shop, and all who desire to see the funniest comedians and the loveliest girls in burlesque will have to come to the Gaiety Theatre.

That's all there is about that.

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.

THE New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which is sent the victims, signed with a "clutching hand." The [illegible] victim of the mysterious assassin is [illegible] Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man. Enraged at the determined effort which Elaine and Craig Kennedy are making to put an end to his crimes, the Clutching Hand, as this [illegible] is known, resorts to all sorts of [illegible] schemes to put them out of the way. Each chapter of the story tells of a new plot against their lives and of the way the great detective uses all his skill to save this pretty girl and himself from death.

DRAMA and Amusements

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Except for "What's Going On" at the Cort, the Boston stage will be musicless during the coming week. All three of the pieces which move in are comedies, and all of them are plays which have made their mark in New York.

Leo Ditrichstein, clever playwright as he is, is a more clever actor. Remember his splendid impersonation of the famous pianist in "The Concert." In "The Phantom Rival," which comes to the Colonial, he is given a wide scope for his talents. He plays five different roles, all of them the fantastic creations of a woman's dream, and finally comes to earth in his own proper person to disillusionize the dreamer.

"The Phantom Rival" is not a ghost play, although the title sounds so. Its name is suggested by the dreams in which a former lover appears in various glorious guises to a married woman whose husband is true enough but commonplace. When the lover really turns up he proves to be even more commonplace than hubby, so the romantic heroine thanks her gods for what they gave her. The play is produced by David Belasco, which means that its artistic side is finely managed, and that various novel pieces of stagecraft are introduced.

It is weird to think of Lew Fields outside of musical comedy. Although we can't dance or sing, he has lived all his stage life to the um tum tee tum of the orchestra and with a buxom background of lookers. In "The High Cost of Loving" he makes his debut as a farceur. This is a merry little farce, the title of which suggests the subject. Fields has a very capable company, according to reports.

George M. Cohan, that apostle of realism, brings to the Tremont tomorrow night his latest play, "The Miracle Man." We have had a procession of Cohan plays recently and each resembles the other in the everyday character of the dialogue. People on Cohan's stage talk exactly like people on the street or at home. George does not believe in epigram or conversational brilliancy except of the slangy variety, and in ordinary conversation I suppose there is very little of it. It is merely a question whether sparkling dialogue does not give keen pleasure even to those who realize that it is artificial.

For example, compare "Lady Windermere's Fan" by Oscar Wilde, with "Seven Keys to Baldpate." The first is a trifle but exquisite. The characters are puppets, but how delightfully they talk, what complete satisfaction there is in hearing such charming English so brilliantly employed. "Seven Keys" is an ingenious play, artistic in its construction, far more interesting to the average person than the Wilde piece. Its characters are very human, just like ourselves, and like ourselves they are either commonplace or profane when they converse. "The Miracle Man" is Cohan's most serious production, but his realism is as evident in it as in his other plays. Cohan is never intentionally abstruse in his remarks. Witness his explanation of "The Miracle Man." Notice that he talks just like his people on the stage:

"Why, my idea of it is this: That there is some good in everybody. That there's more sunlight than shadow in the world. It's one of the things that I myself firmly believe and I've tried to bring it out in 'The Miracle Man.' If you can take a crook like John Madison and imbue him with a God-fearing 'something,' there must be good, even in the worst of us. Crooks can and do reform. I know of many examples that have come under my observation.

"I know men in New York and around the country, a whole lot of them, who are decent, straight fellows today and five or six years ago you wouldn't have put a 10-cent bet on them. They could not be on the level even with themselves. Change of environment, change of associations—that's what did it. And that's what straightens the four crooks in 'The Miracle Man.' They come within the influence of that quaint little New England town and the good people in it. They felt the goodness of the 'Patriarch' without knowing it, or why. Yes, the reformation of those four crooks is the biggest lesson of the play.

"Now, this isn't highbrow stuff, because if a fellow gets too much of that on top he goes out of the gallery. It's just one of the things that I feel myself, just as everybody must feel. It may be that the play is a little on the Christian Science order. But we've all got a little of that in us, too. I know that keeping your mind on the right thing helps a whole lot in bringing it about. If you don't think that you can do a thing, you'll never be able to do it successfully. I know that anyhow.

"I think I can say that this first play I really thoroughly enjoyed doing. It was a pleasure to work at from the very beginning. As soon as I read the book, I felt there was in it the sort of play I had wanted to write. For two months I thought it out, going over it, arranging the dramatic action in my mind. And when I felt I had planned all I could do with it I took up the actual writing. I began it last July and in five or six weeks, early in August, it was done. I enjoyed every minute of the work, too."

The loyalty of the actor to his public is too little appreciated by estregoers. There are countless incidents of performers going through their roles under distressing circumstances, but none more heroic than that set in which little Billie Burke figured last Tuesday night at the Hollis in "Jerry" Miss Burke plays a buoyant comedy part, full of vigor, vitality, life and brightness. She is upon the stage nearly all the time and always presents a smiling countenance.

Monday night she felt ill and, being an actress, it never occurred to her to disappoint her audience. I saw her performance and never saw her more cheerful spirit manifested.

Tuesday night she was worse, yet she came to the theatre and attempted to go on. At the end of each act when she dashed off bubbling with mirth and joy she was met in the wings by members of the company and carried to her dressing room. There could be no question that Billie Burke, and she had to go on. She forced her way through three acts, and few in the audience suspected the pain she was enduring until the very end. But after the third act she could do no more. It was necessary to dismiss the audience with a few words of explanation of her illness. She was hurried to New York the same night and went under the knife of a specialist the next day.

Miss Burke is the wife of Florence Ziegfeld, a wealthy man, and there was no financial necessity for her risking her life as she did Tuesday night rather than send her audience away. She did it because it is the actor's tradition to suffer almost everything rather than stop the play.

When she comes back to the Hollis Street Theatre, her audience should greet her standing. She is a heroine.

When a play has a long run at a stock theatre where a weekly change of bill is the rule, there must be something extraordinary about it. "Common Clay," at the Castle Square, has just had its fiftieth performance. John Craig's clientele has been accustomed to visit him every week, and holding over a play for a long run means the suspension of the ordinary stock business. All Boston has evidently been rushing in to replace the regulars, for "Common Clay" is still running strong and the end of the run is not in sight. Mr. Craig's experience with prize plays has been much happier than the predecessor at the Castle Square, Winthrop Ames, whose $10,000 prize play, "Children of Earth," now running in New York, has not made any pronounced popular appeal.

William Faversham almost alone among the endless idols o ten or fifteen years ago preserves his youth, his good looks and his drawing powers. Neither on or off the stage would one imagine that he is well into middle age, and his magnetic powers seem only to increase with his years. In "The Hawk" he is fitted with a role which suits him even better than the swashbuckling plays of the romantic period in which he first came to the front, or the togs which he wore in "Julius Caesar. William Faversham knows how to dress and he is one of the few actors in America actors can wear evening clothes with the air of belonging to them.

In "The Show Shop," James Forbes' latest play, in which Douglas Fairbanks starred, the first act takes place in a manager's office. The manager, who bears the suggestive name of Rosenbaum, and the stage director are endeavoring to cast a new play called "The Wallop." But here will then find an actor who can wear dress clothes, look like a man about town, and not talk with a Piccadilly accent? Just then Fairbanks, correctly attired, enters the office and both fall upon him and engage him or the parts despite his protests that he isn't an actor and doesn't want to go on the stage.

Faversham came back into his own when he donned evening clothes and played "The Hawk." He acknowledges his debt to them, and thereby sangs a tale. At the Christmas Fund Benefit of the New York American Faversham volunteered to deliver the oration of Marc Antony from "Julius Caesar" as one of the numbers. He came upon the stage filled with supers in Roman garb wearing faultless evening attire and mounted the rostrum. The audience tittered at the sight of a modern dress suit in ancient Rome, but he delivered the oration so fervently and eloquently that ven the supers were carried away by enthusiasm.

ATTRACTIONS AT THE THEATRES

Colonial Theatre.

David Belasco's latest dramatic achievement with one of this manager's most popular stars in the principal role will have its first Boston presentation at the Colonial Theatre on Monday evening, when Leo Ditrichstein will be seen here in "The Phantom Rival." The original company appears in support of Mr. Ditrichstein. The cast includes Laura Hope Crews, Malcolm Williams, Frank Westerton, Lee Millet, John Bedouin, Anna McNaughton, Ethel Marie Sasse.

"The Phantom Rival" is an adaptation by Mr. Ditrichstein of Ferenc Molnar's fascinating three act comedy. The story concerns a young wife and her superlatively jealous husband. The immediate cause of his paroxysms, it transpires, however, is not a concrete person but a phantom rival existing only in the wife's memory and glorified by time. Years before she met her husband she had known and loved a young Russian, whom circumstances had recalled to his own country. He is her ideal. In the succeeding scenes the Russian in real life appears, and the wife is left alone to entertain him. They talk of the past, of his old ambitions, and how far he has progressed toward their realization. As they talk the glamor falls away and she finds her ideal to be of mere clay.

Mr. Ditrichstein's remarkable impersonation of the Russian and the successive characters which he imagines him living in her dream is said to surpass even the wonderful performance he gave in "The Concert." Scenically, "The Phantom Rival" is one of Mr. Belasco's finest triumphs.

Tremont Theatre.

Geo. M. Cohan's compelling comedy drama, "The Miracle Man," based on the Packard novel of the same name, comes to the Tremont Theatre for a limited engagement starting tomorrow night. Purposeful though it be "The Miracle Man" is no sermon or preachment, it is simply a great play that appeals to all mankind. Combining noble sentiment and subtle humor to a greater degree than he has ever yet attained, Mr. Geo. M. Cohan in "The Miracle Man" provides mental nourishment that is relished by the great army of pleasure seekers who have looked to him heretofore only to be amused. The great lesson "The Miracle Man" teaches is none the less potent in appeal because it is delivered amid gales of laughter. The big dramatic moments are there just the same, bearing a message that will strike deep into the heart of every heart and it is promised you will feel better and brighter, cleaner and clearer-vision for having seen it. If it be the sole purpose of the stage merely to entertain and amuse—as some folks continually claim—then "The Miracle Man" fulfils that mission to the uttermost degree; for it is said to be as amusing as anything Mr. Cohan has ever written. Yet it sounds a deep toned note of singular sweetness that cannot fail to find an echo in every human heart that hears it. The entire original Broadway cast that has been appearing in this remarkable play for half a year at the Astor Theatre, New York, will present the piece here, Gail Kane, George Nash and William H. Thompson in the principal parts will be supported by the same associate players that have won distinction during the long Broadway run and being probably the best balanced cast ever gathered together in a modern comedy drama.

Shubert Theatre.

Lew Fields will make his Boston debut as an A. H. Woods star at the Shubert Theatre tomorrow night, in "The High Cost of Loving," a new comedy that has been designated as a novel repast in three courses and which promises to fully bear out that description. "The High Cost of Loving" (Not Living, if you please) by Frank Mandel, from the German, is something entirely different" from the sort of thing the amusement public is used to seeing. In the supporting company Mr. Woods is offering a cast of unusual strength, including Alice Fisher, James Lackaye, George Hassell Charlotte Ives, Wilfred Clarke, Ernest Lambart, and other well known artists, all of whom appeared with Mr. Fields in the six months' run of "The High Cost of Loving" at the Republic Theatre, New York. In "The High Cost of Loving" Mr. Fields has the role of Ludwig Klinke, the Mustard King, whose wife is head of the Purity League. There are times when it is embarrassing to be wedded to the head of a Purity League and Ludwig finds it so, but unexpected good luck saves him from anything more than a day of suspense—while the audience has three hours of continuous laughter.

There will be matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Boston Opera House.

"The Merchant of Venice" will be the offering of the Henry Jewett Players at the Boston Opera House during the forthcoming week. This will be the fifth production of Shakespeare cycle to the sixth week of their season.

R. D. MacLean will be doubly welcome as Shylock, after his impressive characterization of Brutus. Miss Birkett will be Portia, and she will bring to the part not only unusual charm, but also understanding and ability. Miss Corbett, a newcomer of more than ordinary worth, will be the Jessica and Miss Compton the Nerissa. Mr. Ralph will make a thoroughly satisfactory Bassanio, and the roles of Antonio and Gratiano will be in the hands of Mr. Crocker and Mr. Burke. Mr. Jewett will not appear, but will again devote himself solely to the work of directing.

The first recorded performance of "The Merchant of Venice" in America was September 5, 1752, when the Hallam Company, newly landed from the vessel that had brought them from England, opened their American season with a performance of it at Williamsburgh, Va. The play was improvised in an old warehouse on the edge of the forest.

One of the earliest performances in Boston, if not the very first, occurred at the Old Federal Street Theatre on June 17, 1795, when Hipworth acted Shylock in a benefit for himself, with Mrs. Snelling Powell as the Portia. Elizabeth Kemble, who was the first star to appear in one of the companies was engaged in 1796 to play a season at the Boston Theatre, in the course of which she acted Portia.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

Four star features, including Brandon Hurst and his own company in Edward Peple's sensational Lambs' Club Gambol success, "The Girl," with H. Murphy and Blanche Nichols in their brand new farce comedy success, "A Quiet Room;" the wonderful troupe of Okabe Japanese Wonder Workers; Marshall Montgomery, the ventriloquist, and Josephine Davis will comprise the principal attractions at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week. Of all the comedies played by the Lambs at their annual gambols "The Girl," by Edward Peple, has attracted the widest attention. As played it scored the hit of the Lambs' Gambol, and was immediately booked for a long tour over the B. F. Keith circuit. Based upon the well and originality treated turn for the prize of a woman's heart, "The Girl" is unique and one presenting the unusual. "A Quiet Room," which Mr. Murphy has been touring for the past two years. A Quiet Room" is said to be entirely different and better than the famous "Kaw to Uncle Tom," which made them famous.

Gaiety Theatre.

Gus Fay and his Gaiety Girls move into the Gaiety Theatre tomorrow night for a stay of a week. This is one of the best and most popular shows upon the entire burlesque wheel and one which no patron of burlesque can afford to miss. The Gaiety Girls have selected their beauty chorus with special care and headliners as Gus Fay and Harry Morton, a big team in the line of German comedians. His Teutonisms are not imitations or mentality but are genuine. His side partner in fun is Harry K. Morton, the straight opposite of Dutch comedians and between them they create riots. The burlesque is called "The Beauty Doctors," a musical comedy in three acts and five scenes. In the big olio Gus Fay introduces the merriment as Feeley and Mc-Cloud, Zella Russell, Harry Evans, Mae Hodder and Arthur Hiller.

Toy Theatre.

Miss Helen Eyils, who will be seen in Boston this week with the Modern Drama Players at the Toy Theatre, is one of the most valued members of the company. She has distinguished herself in parts like Magda, Nora in "Ghosts," Nan, in John Galsworthy's "The Tragedy of Nan" and in the Bernard Shaw comedies.

The Players will present a triple bill at each performance, "Sonra," by Hermann Sudermann; "The Bear," by Tchekoff, and "Lonesomelike," by Harold Brighouse. Mrs. Stanley C. Clements, one of the most popular members of the company, announces that some of the performances will be given under the auspices of various Boston educational societies. Wellesley College has the entire theatre for the Wednesday matinee. There will be four matinees and six evening performances.

The leading role in "Chitra" will be played by Miss Mona Limerick, who has come from Chicago for the purpose of appearing in it. Miss Limerick was born in Indiana and has spent most of Hindoo literature, especially Tagore. "Chitra" is a play every woman should see. It's theme is feminism and it holds a message.

R. Iden Payne is the director of the company. The scenery and costumes were designed by Livingston Platt.

Tremont Temple Concert.

A concert of unusual character has been arranged for request night at Tremont Temple, Thursday, February 18. The artists will be Evelyn Scotney, the coloratura soprano of the Boston Opera; Howard White, the basso of the same organization; Cara Sapin, contralto of the Boston Opera, and Arthur Hackett, the popular concert and oratorio tenor. The program is unusual in that it contains five quartet numbers, two of them from Lisa Lehmann's "In a Persian Garden," and two from Lehmann's "Daisy Chain." The quartet from "Rigoletto" will be sung by special request. The solo numbers include many request pieces. Among them is "Mon Coeur s'ouvre at ta voix" from "Samson et Delila," by Miss Sapin, "Una Voce Poco Fa" from "Barber of Seville," by Miss Scotney, a coloratura number in which she has never been heard in Boston. Mr. Hackett and Mr. White contribute operatic numbers and songs. The titles of the songs are suggestive of the popular character of the concert. "Mighty Lak a Rose," by Nevin; "Way Down South," by Homer; "Tell Me, Sweet Creature," by Wilson, "My Love is Like a Red, Red Rose," Burns; "A Hundred Pipers," old Scottish, "An Indifferent Mariner," Bullard; "A Smuggler's Song" Kernochan; "Will of the Wisp" Spross, etc. Nearly all the numbers will be sung in English.

Loew's St. James Theatre.

An all-star bill will be presented at Marcus Loew's St. James Theatre the first three days of the coming week. One of the feature acts will be the first appearance here of the Watson Comedy Company, in a rural comedy playlet, "Huckleberry Run." Others will include the Chicago favorite soloist, Ben Sherman, Van and Hyman, called "The Accorded Nuts," in songs and comedy.

The great motion picture star, Paul Panzer, famous as a film villain whose plotting and crimes made the Lubin picture serial, "The Perils of Pauline," of tremendous interest to thousands, will head the bill the last half of the week.

Loew's Orpheum Theatre.

Franklyn Ardell, best known through his work in the New York success, "The Family Cupboard," will head the bill in "The Suffragette Bride" this same bill will include Burt & Harris, tragedians of ragtime; the Grand Trio, in a tuneful repertoire of ballads and musicalities; Lou Anger and her fancy Fantoma, called the queen of all collecting of concert and vaudeville; Herbert & Dennis, "two jolly good fellows," and others.

Marcus Loew's Globe Theatre.

The musical comedy star, Gertrude Barnes, called "The Oh Joy Girl," unable to appear at the Globe Theatre last week, has been put in as a headliner for the first three days of the coming week. Miss Barnes presents four song numbers, all written for her, and displays on the stage $5,000 worth of gowns. A strong bill will surround Miss Barnes.

The feature the last half of the week at the Globe Theatre will be Roland West's musical comedy production, "The Dairy Maids."

PLAYS THAT REMAIN IN TOWN

Hollis Street Theatre.

It is rumored that Miss Billie Burke will be well enough to resume her role in "Jerry," and the brilliant little comedy whose career was cut short by the second performance last week may run the balance of the season at the Hollis. An actress like Miss Burke, whose personality draws the public to the theatre, cannot be kept off the stage, and when she cannot play she must stop. The public will be glad of Miss Burke but delighted with a multitude of friends.

Wilbur Theatre.

The popular success, "A Pair of Sixes" will begin its 10th week at the Wilbur tomorrow evening, and there is still no sign of decreasing interest in this joyous farce.

Cort Theatre.

"What's Going On" will easily be the musicless musical success of the season. Nearly all the numbers will be sung in English.

Loew's Orpheum Theatre.

Franklyn Ardell, best known through his work in the New York success, "The Family Cupboard," will head the bill in "The Suffragette Bride" this same bill will include Burt & Harris, tragedians of ragtime; the Grand Trio, in a tuneful repertoire of ballads and musicalities; Lou Anger and her fancy Fantoma, called the queen of all collecting of concert and vaudeville; Herbert & Dennis, "two jolly good fellows," and others.

The feature the last half of the week at the Globe Theatre will be Roland West's musical comedy production, "The Dairy Maids."

Plymouth Theatre.

The glowing praise showered upon "Too Many Cooks," the delightful farce of suburban life now on the boards for its third week at the Plymouth Theatre, is only one reason why this play is well worth seeing.

Majestic Theatre.

William Farnum in "Cross Coads of Destiny" will remain at the Majestic Theatre another week. Willard Mack, whose patronage in that playhouse during the week large theatre parties from Portland, Bangor, Keene, Springfield, Fall River, Northampton, Manchester and Providence has been in attendance, showing a widespread desire on the part of the New England public to see the stupendous and gorgeous settings of the Wilkes drama, made in the interest of San Francisco's world's fair.

Castle Square Theatre.

Common Clay enters on its 50th week at the Castle Square on Monday without the least indication that any change in program or policy of subscription is now on the horizon. Its third week at the Plymouth Theatre, is only one reason why this play is well worth seeing.

Boston Theatre.

Klaw & Erlanger's musical revival of "Ben-Hur" at the big Boston Theatre continues to attract enormous patronage to that playhouse. During the week large theatre parties from Portland, Bangor, Keene, Springfield, Fall River, Northampton, Manchester and Providence have been in attendance, showing a widespread desire on the part of the New England public to see the stupendous and gorgeous settings of the Wilkes drama, made in the interest of San Francisco's world's fair.

Scenario of R. L. Cuppaige Selected as Best; More Than 2,000 Were Offered.

The Sunday AMERICAN'S prize of $25 for the best motion picture scenario has been won by R. L. Cuppaige of No. 6 Crystal street, Worcester, for a scenario called "Saved the Angelus."

Before than 2,000 sketches were submitted, some of them mere outlines and others quite complete scenarios. Originality and feasibility for the screen were the chief essentials to cover. Originality seems a more rare article than most people imagine. The readers of the manuscripts say that many were mere copies of films that the readers apparently had seen, and others were themes which had been made use of by hack-writers and scenario editors for generations. Some original ideas were impossible of execution by a motion picture company, and the themes of some were so ghastly that they would never do. Some ideas submitted would have made good short stories or even novels, but did not contain enough and sufficiently varied action for a film. The central idea of the winning picture is not the most unusual that was submitted, but struck the judges as best suited for a film. "The costumes are picturesque, the situations striking and the big situation, when the elopers, stealing across the fields, are caught by the Angelus bell and instinctively drop into the attitude of the famous painting "The Angelus," contain elements that seem likely to make a successful picture.

The AMERICAN is submitting the sketch to the Bosworth Company and if the director of that company approves of it, it will be produced.

SAVED BY THE ANGELUS.

Pierre.....Good looking peasant.
Lenore's parents.....Peasants.
Marquise.....Dignified old aristocrat.
Peasants, servants, etc.

SYNOPSIS.

Scene—Normandy, eighteenth century, Pierre and Lenore are betrothed. Later—Pierre leaves to make his fortune. Several years go by without any news from Pierre. The crops fail, and Lenore's parents are evicted from their farm. They form a disconsolate group around their household goods on the side of the road when the aged Marquis comes driving by. He stops and inquires the cause of their eviction; they tell him his agent evicted them on account of the failure of the crops. He calls the agent and tells him to leave his bailiffs and put the goods back in the house again.

Lenore's parents are overjoyed at the turn of affairs. Lenore thanks the Marquis; he is very much taken with her beauty and simplicity. Later the Marquis proposes to Lenore. Lenore is urged by her parents to marry the Marquis for the plenty her settlement to Pierre. They prevail on her, and she marries the Marquis. Shortly after the married Pierre returns, a peachcomber, a fisherman master-piece of unusual merit.

GABY DESLYS IN "HER TRIUMPH," PARAMOUNT PICTURES AT THE PARK THEATRE, WEEK OF FEB. 8.

Park Theatre.

At the Park Theatre for the entire week of February 8 will be exhibited one of the most novel and original screen subjects ever offered in the phenomenal history of the motion picture camera. Mlle. Gaby Deslys, the internationally famous star, is to be presented in a unique photo-play entitled, "Her Triumph," produced by the Famous Players Film Company and released on the Paramount Program. In this production Mlle. Deslys is seen in some of her most world-renowned dances. These include the special orchestra program by the Park concert orchestra, xylophone solo by Mr. Cyril Gardner, the Park Topical Review, "The Heart Punch," a one-part photo-drama featuring Jess Willard, the new "white hope," and "The Beachcomber," a Bosworth masterpiece of unusual merit.

Modern Theatre.

"The Gilden Fool," a powerfully appealing dramatic photo-play with William Farnum in the leading character, will be the headline feature for the coming week at the Modern Theatre. The production is staged by the William Fox Feature Film studios and is picturized from the drama of the same name that served as a successful vehicle for several years for Nat Goodwin, America's well known comedian. The plot deals with the progress of a young Chauncey Short, a typical "gilded fool," through his days in idleness and his nights in frivolity. He finally weds "only girl" and through love of her is awakened to a realization of his many shortcomings. The play as a whole presents a series of tense and exciting scenes capped by one of the strongest climaxes ever photographed. Mr. Farnum is ably supported. The rest of the bill consists of the Weekly Pathe release, another installment of "The Master Key," and several of the latest comic productions.

Tremont Temple.

The wonderful Sir Douglas Mawson Antarctic Motion Pictures, which are being shown in the Temple, will positively close Saturday night of this week. The strange animal life of the Antarctic, including the penguins, whales, seals and stormy petrels are shown in great profusion as well as the most fantastic ice formation imaginable.

National Theatre.

Gryand Cheerbert's Five Marvelous Manchurians, a troupe of giant Chinamen who perform the most startling feats imaginable while hanging suspended in midair by their queues, and "Should a Woman Tell?" one of the most thrilling and talked-about films of the generation, will be the new principal attractions at the big National, Tremont and Berkeley streets, the largest theatre in Boston, commencing Monday. The Marvelous Manchurians will be only one feature of the strong vaudeville show. For the first three days of the week the program will include Fred Lesler, the minstrel and bone soloist; Jones and McGrail, Lee Tripp and Carr, Williams and Quigley, and Warren and Renfrew. "Should a Woman Tell?" will head the picture program, surrounded by a strong bill of comedy reels.

Gleason Lectures.

Mr. Herbert W. Gleason will resume his course of lectures in Tremont Temple, on Wednesday evening and Saturday matinee of this week. His subject will be San Francisco and the Panama Exposition. A fine opportunity will be presented in these two lectures to get advance views and information of the great exposition to be held this year.

Scollay Square Olympia.

The following all-star vaudeville features will be on the boards at the Scollay Square Olympia: Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Barrowe, American originators of smoke and sand pictures; Leon Filipino entertainer; Harry Sullivan and company in the comedy-dramatic playlet, "Back to Newburg;" Johnny Small and Sister, singing and dancing; Six Musical Spillars, musical offering; "From Opera to Ragtime;" Orvell and Gallagher, eccentric comedy duo, and Motor Madness, the sensation of the age.

Bowdoin Sq. Theatre.

At the Bowdoin Square Theatre there will be seen Hyman Adler, the eminent character actor, in a sketch entitled, "Soloman's Bargain," which is one of the best ever offered at that house. This is Mr. Adler's first visit to Boston in a long time. The wonderful moving picture production, "America," will also be viewed.

Howard Athenaeum.

Dick Rudolph, the star pitcher of the Boston Braves, world's champions, will be the top feature at the Howard Athenaeum for the entire week. The burlesque will be contributed by the Beauty, Youth and Folly company, which is headed by Joe Emerson, the famous tramp comedian, and Mina Schail. Flo Prince, Dan Gracey, Jules Bennett and a big chorus group will delight in a portfolio of silver songs and dances.

Grand Opera House.

One of the real leaders in burlesque, the Charming Widows Company, will arrive at the Grand Opera House Monday to entertain the patrons in the art of advance amusement. This company is made up of clever comedians, headed by that versatile chap, Eddie Dale, and Lillian English, Pauline Palmer, Simone Beryll, Emile Argoust, Tommy Cooper and other favorites. Thursday night there will be a big wrestling event under the direction of George Tuohey.

Exeter Street Theatre.

Mary Pickford, the queen of photoplayers, will be seen this week at the Exeter Street Theatre in her most wonderful picture, "Cinderella." This film suits the dainty lady better than anything in which she has yet been seen.

Unique Theatre.

"The Exploits of Elaine" continues to draw multitudes to the Unique, and a long bill of other features is equally pleasing. Wednesday comes "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in pictures.

"What's Going On" Named by Accident

"What's Going On" secured its name by accident. One day, while a rehearsal was being conducted, Mr. Cort was sitting in the auditorium of the theatre. A friend was with him, a boy not connected with the theatre and who knew little of the stage across the footlights. The rehearsal was not complete, just bits here and there, and to one not accustomed to these things, rather confusing.

Actors, author, office manager and even down to office boy had suggested names for the piece, but none seemed quite suitable and Mr. Cort almost despaired of finding just what he wanted. I've sat here patiently with you for an hour, I admit I have been entertained, but, for heaven's sake, tell me what's going on."

"That's it!" exclaimed Mr. Cort, brushing past his astonished friend and rushing to the stage. "That's it. I've got the title of this play. What's Going On? That's it. And just keep that farce action going so that the audience will ask the same question until you wind it up."

MME. SEMBRICH IN RECITAL TODAY

The song recital of Mme. Sembrich, which will be her only appearance in Boston this year, will be given in Symphony Hall, this afternoon, at 3:30. Mme. Sembrich's complete program will be as follows:

(a) Die Post.....Franz Schubert
(b) Der Neugierige.....Franz Schubert
(c) Die Forelle.....Franz Schubert
(d) Ungeduld.....Franz Schubert

(a) Wiegenlied.....Robert Schumann
(b) Lorelei-ar Read Nos. 1 and 2.....Robert Schumann
(c) Mondnacht.....Robert Schumann
(d) Der Nussbaum.....Robert Schumann
(e) Widmung.....Robert Schumann

(a) Vergebliches Standchen.....Johannes Brahms
(b) Wie Melodien zieht es.....Johannes Brahms
(c) Feldeinsamkeit.....Johannes Brahms
(d) Nachtigall.....Johannes Brahms
(e) Vergebliches Standchen.....Johannes Brahms

(a) Kalinka (song from the Past).....Tschaikowsky
(b) Pramorskaia (Song of Song).....Mongiel
(c) Pastorale.....Debussy
(d) Clair de Lune.....Debussy
(e) Long Ago.....Arthur Foote
(f) Mon Mira.....Norwegian Folksong

Raymond Havens, the justly admired pianist, of this city will give his annual recital in Jordan Hall, next Wednesday afternoon, February 10. Big program will be as follows:

Sonata, C major, Op. 53.....Beethoven
Variations on a Theme of Paganini.....Brahms
Book I.
Au dem Wasser zu singen.....Schubert-Liszt
Scherzo, B minor, Op. 20, No. 2.....Chopin
Etude, F minor, Op. 25, No. 2.....Chopin
Ballade, A flat major.....Chopin
Barcarolle.....Chopin

The opportunity to hear Tina Lerner, the young Russian pianist, will be welcomed by all lovers of the piano. She will give a recital in Jordan Hall next Saturday afternoon, February 13, at 3 o'clock. Her program is a of much interest and includes numbers of Liszt, Chopin, Rachmaninoff and other composers.

The next Sunday afternoon concert in Symphony Hall will be on February 21, when John McCormack will appear. On the following evening, February 22 (Washington's Birthday), Mr. McCormack will give a second concert.

In certain respects the concert in Symphony Hall Sunday afternoon, February 26, will be the most interesting of the season for it will mark the appearance here after many years of the great Spanish 'cellist, Pablo Casals. He will appear with his very good friend and fellow artist, Harold Bauer.

Mrs. Clara Gabrilowitsch (Clara Clemens) will give a song recital in Steinert Hall, next Thursday afternoon, February 11, at 3. Kurt Schindler will be her accompanist. Her program is varied and attractive, ranging from Italian to Russian composers.

The fourteenth public rehearsal and concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to be given next Friday afternoon, February 12, and Saturday evening, February 13, respectively, will have as soloist Miss Julia Culp. She will sing the "Lament of Arianna," by Monteverde. The father of the lady who will comprise the Arioso by Handel and Beethoven's "Adelaide." The Adelaide has been specially selected for Miss Culp by Arnold Schoenberg.

The first of the Schumann symphony will be that in D minor, last heard in Boston two years ago, when it was conducted by Mr. Urch. The other orchestral numbers will be Bach's suite in B minor for flute and string orchestra, Mr. Andre Maquiarre being the solo flutist, and Mendelssohn's overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

The Handel and Haydn Society will give its miscellaneous concert in Symphony Hall Sunday evening, February 14, at 7:30 o'clock. The soloist will be Mrs. Caroline Hudson-Alexander, a soprano, who has made many friends in Boston during her appearances here. The program includes Gounod's "Gallia."

A most interesting concert will be that arranged for next Thursday evening, when Mme. Elsa Foerster will sing a program of Mr. Charles Fonteyn Manney's compositions, and the composer himself will play the accompaniments. Among the songs will be the well known cycle, "A Shropshire Lad." Miss M. E. Stott will play obligatos to some of the songs on the French horn.

That gigantic enterprise, the new Harvard Stadium, to be dedicated to the Harvard Stadium, is proceeding very successfully. Manager S. Kronberg reports that boxes are being engaged by society people from New York and Chicago as well as Boston, and that it looks as though the entire Newport colony will go over to the North Shore contingent intended to come to Boston for the event which will be held June 25. As has been announced, the entire orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera House, under the direction of Alfred Hertz, the veteran Wagnerian conductor of that institution, will be brought over. Prima donna will be Mme. Johanna Gadski. Mme. Schumann Heink, Mme. Alda, Mme. Maurel, Berger, Whitehill, Reiss, Goritz and Rurodeal, all of the Metropolitan company.

Enrico Rungin, the Italian composer and singing teacher who makes his residence in Boston, has not returned from his prolonged summer vacation in Italy. Mr. Barrala was called by the Italian officials because he is a reservist, and it looked as though Italy would be drawn into the war. His release would indicate, he thinks, that the chance of Italy entering the war on the side of the allies has not been realized. The new songs include "Thou Art Beloved," "The Judgment of Paris" and "Autumn."

Mrs. Gertrude Holt, lyric soprano, will be the soloist at next Sunday's eighth annual benefit concert of the Musicians' Mutual Benefit Society of Boston, incorporated, in Mechanics' Building. She will sing the "Polonaise" from Thomas' "Mignon," accompanied by the largest band in the world, consisting of 105 expert musicians.

Mrs. Holt was for two years soloist with the Cecilia Society and has sung with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Choral Art Society and the Boston Festival Orchestra. She was also soloist for the United States Marine Band and, whose conductor, John Philip Sousa, will conduct the band next Sunday evening.

Latest Releases.

Kitty is young, an heiress, adored by a doting guardian. She goes to Miss Smythe's select seminary, and when the play opens it is rehearsal afternoon of the annual school drama. Kit is missing! A note is discovered in Kit's room which horrifies the austere principal—Kit has obtained permission to drive to Fordham with Jefferson from 4 to 5 and has gone without a chaperone. And there is Kit fun miles from home in the car—dress, already late and with a blowout. Then—just as it happens in the sentimental novel—"Love at First Sight,' that she is reading—a handsome young man appears and offers assistance. Then there's a charming love romance.

Mlle. Gaby Deslys, the internationally famous star, in a unique photo-play, entitled "Her Triumph," produced in France by the Famous Players Film Company and released on the Paramount program.

"Her Triumph" contains some of Gaby's most world-renowned dances, interwoven with a clever, dramatic plot that holds the interest from the first flash to the stirring climax. The drama at first shows Gaby as a humble chorus girl in Paris, whose intelligence and eagerness are noticed by her manager, who makes her understudy to the great Mlle. Simonde, a famous and very jealous leading lady. Simonde, who is in town with the leading man, Claude Devereaux, notices his attention to Gaby, believes that he has fallen in love with her, and tries to have her ejected from the company. Failing in this, Simonde resigns, which gives the ambitious Gaby the chance she has so long sought, and she goes on in Simonde's place. Her performance that night is so splendid that Simonde, who has come to witness her understudy's failure, is so enraged by her success that she pulls a revolver from her bosom and attempts to kill her rival. But Gaby has intended for just such a contingency, and Claude Devereaux, her dancing partner, who however is in love with her, is slightly wounded, and Simonde, baffled and furious, is forced to read in the morning papers of her rival's triumphant and tearful hit of the preceding night.

Harry Campbell, New England manager of the Box Office Attraction Company of America, announces that the first release of Betty Nansen, the famous Danish actress, will take place the latter part of this month. Mr. Campbell predicts great prosperity for the foreign star and even ventures so far as to assume that her popularity will rank with those of the present leaders. "As for her work," says Mr. Campbell, "she has no peer. Miss Nansen is equally as great a screen actress as she has proven herself a great artiste."

TINA LERNER, AT JORDAN HALL, FEB. 13

EMANUEL ONDRICEK, JORDAN HALL, FEB. 19.

FRANK M'INTYRE HAD HIS TROUBLES

Frank McIntyre, who is now creating the endless laughter at the Wilbur Theatre, in "A Pair of Sixes," makes a pleasure of his work, and his acting of the part of T. John Boggs of Iowa him but little less enjoyment than the audience. But for two years past Mr. McIntyre appeared in most comedy, playing the star comedy role in "Oh, Oh, Delphine," and he insists that that was real work for him.

One night, during the Boston run of "Oh, Oh, Delphine," Mr. McIntyre was laboring particularly hard with that unforgettable lyric, "Everything's at Home Except Your Wife," and on a warm Wednesday night, the singer was tired after two performances, and the patter of the words he had sung so many times seemed determined to elude him. In such moments of unsound diverts the memory from its course.

The orchestra, down beneath the stage apron, knows the music well, and the players all carry union cards and are not temperamental or forgetful. They play straight ahead, quite oblivious of any lapses of memory on the part of the player. If the singer does not go with them they are soon within sound of him, and he never catches up.

With all this in mind McIntyre was hard on the trail of the elusive verse, his whole soul centred on the lyric. In the midst of this fearful concentration he heard one of the chorus girls in the lines behind him whisper, in audible tones:

"Oh, oh!" the voice gasped, "look who's in the box."

McIntyre refused to listen and chanted firmly, "But not your wife."

Again came the penetrating whisper. "You do, too, know them; it is the Jills boy from Pittsfield."

Determined not to flutter on, as lash the singer went on bravely half a line behind the orchestra. "But not your wife."

Between the words and the music the whisper of the other girl came. "Oh, sure, I know. They run us all around the time we was there. They scem us. Oh, my."

By this time Frank had resigned the song to the orchestra, and knowing his charms well he was anxious to see the gay youngsters who were eyeing the afternoon matinee co-helpers. With a last valiant effort he jumped in "Everything's at home except your wife," and as the chorus took up the refrain he glanced across to the box and caught sight of the whispers had come.

There he saw two of Broadway's beauties from the old, old Weber and Fields days, India, rubber neckey pianist, a thousand by daylight, but presentable with makeup and foot lights. With set, pointing lips, they were still gleaning at the box. Prepared to see two infants who had escaped from the parental eye on a fashion college vacation on a lark, the comedian turned and faced his audience. Only one of the boxes was occupied and in it sat the Jills boys from Pittsfield.

"They were between sixty and seventy years of age," says Mr. McIntyre, "alike as twins, and white beards swept their chests."

There was no encore. The singer couldn't remember one.

URGES SUNDAY THEATRE CLOSING

"One of the many wholesome features of New England life is the respect paid to the Sabbath," says Mr. Fields. "Especially is this true concerning the theatre. During my tour of the country I have noted with a great deal of pleasure that a number of statesmen were introducing bills in their Legislatures to compel theatres to be closed on Sunday. I believe the advocates of the reform will be successful. The habit of work is not from a religious standpoint, but a purely utilitarian one.

"The conscientious, earnest worker, the work of the stage is the best kind of work, and for one to take from the people the efforts it is imperative that at least one day in each seven be set apart for rest. Personally, I have been fortunate in the matter of not having to play Sunday."

Coming Events.

Beginning February 15, the Toy Theatre will make its second important production when George Bernard Shaw's much discussed play, "Misalliance," will be produced with Gertrude Kingston, the English actress, in the part of the Lady of Quality, and Aurora in "How He Lied to Her Husband" will be created the role of the Empress Catherine, and Shaw himself has declared her the only woman in England capable of playing the part. Jessamine Elizabeth and Catherine. Miss Kingston comes to Boston because she has been compelled to "Cut" other plays, and "Misalliance" is produced for the first time in America at the Toy next week. With it will be seen another play by Shaw that is new to Boston audiences, "Kept Off." Miss Kingston also appears in that, and will support the Englishwoman. Clifford Painter will act the stage after Russian models, and the settings are said to be marvels of beauty in the new production. It was the Modern Drama Players appear in three short plays.

Nazimova, in Marie Craig Wentworth's much-discussed war play, "War Brides," will be the headliner at B. F. Keith's Theatre the week of February 15. Nazimova was originally booked for this week at Keith's. Owing to her big success in New York, she was held over for the third consecutive week at B. F. Keith's Palace Theatre at Broadway and Forty-seventh street.

MME. SEMBRICH IN RECITAL TODAY

The song recital of Mme. Sembrich, which will be her only appearance in Boston this year, will be given in Symphony Hall, this afternoon, at 3:30. Mme. Sembrich's complete program will be as follows:

(a) Die Post.....Franz Schubert
(b) Der Neugierige.....Franz Schubert
(c) Die Forelle.....Franz Schubert
(d) Ungeduld.....Franz Schubert

(a) Wiegenlied.....Robert Schumann
(b) Lorelei-ar Read Nos. 1 and 2.....Robert Schumann
(c) Mondnacht.....Robert Schumann
(d) Der Nussbaum.....Robert Schumann
(e) Widmung.....Robert Schumann

(a) Vergebliches Standchen.....Johannes Brahms
(b) Wie Melodien zieht es.....Johannes Brahms
(c) Feldeinsamkeit.....Johannes Brahms
(d) Nachtigall.....Johannes Brahms
(e) Vergebliches Standchen.....Johannes Brahms

(a) Kalinka (song from the Past).....Tschaikowsky
(b) Pramorskaia (Song of Song).....Mongiel
(c) Pastorale.....Debussy
(d) Clair de Lune.....Debussy
(e) Long Ago.....Arthur Foote
(f) Mon Mira.....Norwegian Folksong

Raymond Havens, the justly admired pianist, of this city will give his annual recital in Jordan Hall, next Wednesday afternoon, February 10. Big program will be as follows:

Sonata, C major, Op. 53.....Beethoven
Variations on a Theme of Paganini.....Brahms
Book I.
Au dem Wasser zu singen.....Schubert-Liszt
Scherzo, B minor, Op. 20, No. 2.....Chopin
Etude, F minor, Op. 25, No. 2.....Chopin
Ballade, A flat major.....Chopin
Barcarolle.....Chopin

The opportunity to hear Tina Lerner, the young Russian pianist, will be welcomed by all lovers of the piano. She will give a recital in Jordan Hall next Saturday afternoon, February 13, at 3 o'clock. Her program is a of much interest and includes numbers of Liszt, Chopin, Rachmaninoff and other composers.

The next Sunday afternoon concert in Symphony Hall will be on February 21, when John McCormack will appear. On the following evening, February 22 (Washington's Birthday), Mr. McCormack will give a second concert.

In certain respects the concert in Symphony Hall Sunday afternoon, February 26, will be the most interesting of the season for it will mark the appearance here after many years of the great Spanish 'cellist, Pablo Casals. He will appear with his very good friend and fellow artist, Harold Bauer.

Mrs. Clara Gabrilowitsch (Clara Clemens) will give a song recital in Steinert Hall, next Thursday afternoon, February 11, at 3. Kurt Schindler will be her accompanist. Her program is varied and attractive, ranging from Italian to Russian composers.

The fourteenth public rehearsal and concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to be given next Friday afternoon, February 12, and Saturday evening, February 13, respectively, will have as soloist Miss Julia Culp. She will sing the "Lament of Arianna," by Monteverde. The father of the lady who will comprise the Arioso by Handel and Beethoven's "Adelaide." The Adelaide has been specially selected for Miss Culp by Arnold Schoenberg.

The first of the Schumann symphony will be that in D minor, last heard in Boston two years ago, when it was conducted by Mr. Urch. The other orchestral numbers will be Bach's suite in B minor for flute and string orchestra, Mr. Andre Maquiarre being the solo flutist, and Mendelssohn's overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

The Handel and Haydn Society will give its miscellaneous concert in Symphony Hall Sunday evening, February 14, at 7:30 o'clock. The soloist will be Mrs. Caroline Hudson-Alexander, a soprano, who has made many friends in Boston during her appearances here. The program includes Gounod's "Gallia."

A most interesting concert will be that arranged for next Thursday evening, when Mme. Elsa Foerster will sing a program of Mr. Charles Fonteyn Manney's compositions, and the composer himself will play the accompaniments. Among the songs will be the well known cycle, "A Shropshire Lad." Miss M. E. Stott will play obligatos to some of the songs on the French horn.

That gigantic enterprise, the new Harvard Stadium, to be dedicated to the Harvard Stadium, is proceeding very successfully. Manager S. Kronberg reports that boxes are being engaged by society people from New York and Chicago as well as Boston, and that it looks as though the entire Newport colony will go over to the North Shore contingent intended to come to Boston for the event which will be held June 25. As has been announced, the entire orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera House, under the direction of Alfred Hertz, the veteran Wagnerian conductor of that institution, will be brought over. Prima donna will be Mme. Johanna Gadski. Mme. Schumann Heink, Mme. Alda, Mme. Maurel, Berger, Whitehill, Reiss, Goritz and Rurodeal, all of the Metropolitan company.

Enrico Rungin, the Italian composer and singing teacher who makes his residence in Boston, has not returned from his prolonged summer vacation in Italy. Mr. Barrala was called by the Italian officials because he is a reservist, and it looked as though Italy would be drawn into the war. His release would indicate, he thinks, that the chance of Italy entering the war on the side of the allies has not been realized. The new songs include "Thou Art Beloved," "The Judgment of Paris" and "Autumn."

Mrs. Gertrude Holt, lyric soprano, will be the soloist at next Sunday's eighth annual benefit concert of the Musicians' Mutual Benefit Society of Boston, incorporated, in Mechanics' Building. She will sing the "Polonaise" from Thomas' "Mignon," accompanied by the largest band in the world, consisting of 105 expert musicians.

Mrs. Holt was for two years soloist with the Cecilia Society and has sung with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Choral Art Society and the Boston Festival Orchestra. She was also soloist for the United States Marine Band and, whose conductor, John Philip Sousa, will conduct the band next Sunday evening.

PAULINE WHITSON REAL AMERICAN

"You are an Emmet girl aren't you?" was asked of Pauline Whitson the tall, brown-haired, slate-eyed young woman who plays the part of Beatrice Darnley with William Faversham in "The Hawk" at the Shubert.

"Why no more after that?" said the girl in question.

"Well, you speak with an English accent," was the reply.

"Yes," denied Miss Whitson, "and what did you suppose—a French one.

"The subtleties and quirks the English language with its degrees of correctness, one is quickly put down as a Britisher—as if our native American language was a sort of tongued offspring of the same tongue. Of course it is amusing the variety of dialects and perversions of English we have in America, but the same thing applies to Great Britain and to quite as marked a degree, while the standard of purity of speech is the same to England applies to America also.

"I am an American. I must say a 'really truly' one, therefore for I was born and reared in the heart of the Cumberland mountains of Tennessee. I am Anglo-Saxon, and through—for many generations and the nearest kinship I have with English blood is four generations on the person of a Tory ancestor who has lost established himself in America when the Revolution began, and who cast his lot with the old country. Because of this he has become a skeleton in the closet of his descendants ever since. All of the rest of my progenitors have fought for and died for America. Those was David Vance, distinguished in the battle of King's Mountain—and other as gallant and brave. So you see," ended this very patriotic person "of the land," that I am an American.

Amusements.
